Pensamientos

I am certain that by now, most of us have read or heard that the Republican Party at both the state and national levels has launched an energetic campaign to attract Latino voters into their political party using the mantra that Latinos should easily become Republicans because as "conservatives" they practice family values and are not supporters of abortion.

Heck, they trot out those self-appointed Leaders of the Mexican-American Latino community, Cuban-American Marco Rubio and Cuban-Canadian Ted Cruz as prime examples that the Republican Party welcomes Latinos. If only they were not Cuban but Mexican American – that HUGE voting block! But Republicans probably believe, "Why not? They all look alike!" Unfortunately for Republicans, they have other issues beside family values and abortion. Those darn problems of immigration reform, voter identification, and civil rights!

Why in the world did the Heritage Foundation, that far right supposedly Think Tank, come out with a pronouncement that immigrants have lower intelligence than White Americans! They even went on to say that if these low intellectuals keep on coming and squatting in America, they will produce similarly low IQ kids that will eventually populate America with low intellectuals and, there goes the country!

Or how about that state representative from Kansas, Virgil Peck, who presented a solution to the state's feral hog problem by proposing that shooting feral hogs from the air would solve their hog infestation. He couldn't stop there. He had to add that shooting "illegal aliens" from the air would also help to solve what he perceived an "illegal alien invasion" in that state. Latinos, ask yourselves, how can you go wrong with a buddy like that!

Ok, Ok, so he gives Latinos one out of a hundred, so let's go easy on him. Probably the most effective recruiter of Latinos to the Republican Party is John Tanton, Chairman of Federation for American Immigration Reform (FAIR) who has been on the job for more than 40 years organizing English Only efforts, Minutemen on the border, Center for Immigration Reform, and Senate Bill 1070 in Arizona.

One cannot argue that the SB 1070 was a work of art. While the bill authorized police officers to stop any breathing brown skinned person and demand that they produce a birth certificate showing that the stopped person was a US citizen, all the officer had to do was somehow tell the difference between a Native Born Chicano or a Brown skinned brother from south of the border. Well, what's a little civil rights inconvenience in the eyes of Arizona cops?

Unfortunately, we later found out the American Legislative Exchange Council (ALEC) was very instrumental in crafting much of the Arizona law supposedly to bring about more prisoners that would need to be housed in private penitentiaries. Whoever is writing those uniquely creative Latino recruiting scripts for the Republican Party to convince Latinos that Republicans see beyond family values and birth control is probably laughing all the way to the bank and counseling Republicans to: "Remember to take the husk off the tamale before you eat it. Otherwise, those Latinos will think that you are not sincere!"

Mr. Gallegos lives in San Antonio, Texas and is a long time Chicano activist.

Nicolas Kanellos Receives Mayor's Hispanic Award

Nicolas Kanellos, Brown Foundation Professor of Hispanic Literature and Director of Arte Público Press (APP), is among five Houstonians to receive the 2013 Mayor's Hispanic Heritage Award. The honor was part of the city's observance of Hispanic Heritage Month.

"It is a true honor to see my work recognized in this way, but there are so many people in education who merit attention and support in what they do," Kanellos said. "I hope that this honor serves to showcase Arte Público Press as an important effort for Houston and beyond."

Arte Público Press is the oldest and most established publisher of contemporary and recovered literature by Hispanic authors in the nation. Kanellos also directs the Recovering the U.S. Hispanic Literary Heritage program, housed in APP, which strives to reconstitute the literary and historical legacy of Hispanics in the U.S. from colonial times to 1960. To date, hundreds of thousands of essays, autobiographies, historical and journalistic writings, novels, diaries and letters are being integrated into textbooks and curriculum from kindergarten to high school to college.

"There is no other effort like this to do the hard work of digging into archives, rescuing perishable historical documents and making them accessible, so we have a more complete understanding about how this country developed and what role Latinos played," he said.

Leonel J. Castillo Passes Away in Houston, Texas

Leonel J. Castillo, 74, passed away on November 4, 2013. Born June 9, 1939 in Victoria, Texas, Leonel obtained his Bachelor's degree from St. Mary's University in San Antonio, his Master's degree from University of Pittsburgh, and honorary Ph.D. degrees.

As a young idealist, Leonel volunteered for the Peace Corps and served in the Philippines, where he met his wife of over 50 years. Leonel then moved to Houston in 1967 with his family and soon became involved with local neighborhood organizations. He organized across racial lines and worked to find common ground on important issues to each community, including integration and better educational opportunities for the children of Houston.

He served as Director of SER-Jobs for Progress and board member of Catholic Charities and the Memorial Hermann Hospital advisory board. He was one of the co-founders of the Houston Hispanic Chamber of Commerce and Houston International University. He also was a teacher at the University of Houston and Texas Southern University.

Elected City Controller of Houston in 1971, Leonel became Houston's first Hispanic elected official. In 1977, after the election of President Jimmy Carter, he was appointed Commissioner of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service. In 1979, Leonel came back to Texas and ran unsuccessfully for Mayor of Houston. He later served as education liaison and advisor to Houston Mayors Lanier, Brown and White.

Leonel Castillo was also one of the founders of Latinos Unidos, a weekly breakfast meeting at Velia's Cafe on Houston's Eastside. Latinos Unidos, which started in the mid 1980s and ran into the 1990s, drew a regular crowd of 25 to 30 people. Politicos, community activists and others made it a point to stop by and find out what others in the Hispanic community were doing and planning. For information on his career, see the Texas Monthly article in the August, 1976, Will Success Spoil Leonel Castillo? by Tom Curtis.

Leticia Van de Putte and Wendy Davis: Top the Ticket

How difficult will it be for Wendy Davis and Leticia Van de Putte to pull off a win in November 2014? (Assuming they are the Democratic nominees after the March Primaries) Below are the election results for the General Elections from 2002, 2006 and 2010 in Texas. In each General Election the total turn out is only in the 4 million voter range.

As can also be seen in the tables below, in each of the last three General Elections, Rick Perry, (who was the winner each time), only won by 8% in 2002, and 5% in 2010. In 2006, Perry won the General Election by less than a majority. Stated differently, Rick Perry, while enjoying the longest run in governor's house in Texas history, was in fact, NOT elected by a great majority of the voters who turned out to vote.

While tables below speak to the performance of the candidates in each of the elections cycles, it is equally instructive to look at the performance of the registered voters in the state of Texas. According to the Texas Secretary of State office, in 2002, there were 15,514,289 people in Texas who were of voting age. In other words, they were over 18 years of age. Out of this 15,514,289 voting age population, only 12,563,459 were actually registered to vote and only 4,553,987 bothered to come out and vote. This turn out in the Texas General Election on November X represented just 36.24% of the registered voters.

In 2006, voter turnout in the Texas General Election was equally dismal. Out of 16,636,742 people who were living in Texas and over the age of 18, only 13,074,279 were registered to vote. Come election day on November X, only 4.4 million managed to cast their vote which represented a turnout of 33.64% of the registered voters in Texas.

The 2010 General Election saw almost 5 million Texas voters come out. It was also Governor Perry's smallest margin of victory in terms of percentage points. But again, the percentage of voters who could vote and did turnout to vote remained under the 40% mark. In 2010, there were 18,789,238 people over 18 years of age in Texas, but only 13,269,233 were registered to vote, and only 4,935,356 went to the polls.

The challenge then for the Democrats is register those potential voters who continue to number around 20% of the total population over 18 years of age and then get those other 55 percent who are registered to vote to come out to vote. Of course, the Republican Party in Texas also looks at these numbers and they have their sights on picking up some of these same voters. Towards this end they have are reaching out to Hispanic voters and have a number of Hispanic candidates running for statewide office.

The most prominent of these candidates thus far is George P. Bush, grandson of President George Bush the first. Joining him on the 2014 ballot are Miriam Martinez for Governor and a number of Congressional candidates who are incumbents. While it is no secret that the Republicans are working overtime to increase the number of Hispanic voters in the state, this last year has also seen an extra effort by the Democratic Party in the borm of Battleground Texas.

Battleground Texas, which has many former Obama workers on its staff has also been working overtime to get people registered to vote. It has on the ground field operation in many cities around the state and is not afraid to spend money. Battleground Texas stated goal is to turn Texas Blue and the 2014 elections is going to be its first reality test of how much their organizing work has paid off.

But after all is said and done, who takes office in the next election cycle is going to depend on who turns out to vote.

The Album That Made Us Very Proud During the Years of the Chicano Movement

During the years of the Chicano Movement there was a tremendous pride that ran through our bodies when the album “Mestizo” was released in 1974.

Daniel Valdez, younger brother of Luis Valdez and one of the early members of El Teatro Campesino, had produced an amazing collection of songs with Atlantic Records that reflected the sentiments and hopes of a new cultural identity.

Mestizo had a limited press run of only 100,000 albums but for those of us in el movimiento who managed to get a hold of copy of the album, we spent hours listening to the words and many messages embedded in the songs.

Daniel went on to a long acting career and appeared in Zoot Suit, La Bamba and other Hollywood movies. Today, some 40 years later, Daniel Valdez is preparing to re-release it as a CD on Amazon, and iTunes. To hear selected songs, visit Youtube and type in Daniel Valdez.

Teacher Profile

Daniel Hinojosa

PE/Health Teacher, Co-Athletic Director, EAPREP Football Coach, and Baseball Coach at East Austin College Prep

I have lived in Austin for the last 13 years and have made it my home but I am originally from South Texas. My mother, grandmother and great-grandmother raised me, my older brother and younger sister in Corpus Christi, Texas. Our house was never empty. Throughout most of my childhood we had up to 10 people living together—uncles, aunts, and cousins all lived together in one house from time to time. It was in this home that I learned the values of respect, integrity, leadership, responsibility, and most of all, being humble and grateful for what we had. I didn't realize it at the time, but these three amazing women that taught me so much—my mom, grandmother and great-grandmother—would become my personal heroes.

After graduating from Moody High School in Corpus Christi, I was admitted to the University of Texas at Austin and quickly decided to make Austin my new home. I began working with under-privileged youth as a mentor while in college and made this my career as a coach. Involved in sports my entire life, I have had some amazing coaches and mentors. If it weren't for these individuals, along with my family members, I wouldn't be the man/teacher/coach I am today. This is what I hope to bring to students and athletes that I coach and teach.

Certification: Teaching certification physical Fitness Ec-12

Favorite Activity: My favorite activities are playing softball, working out, playing music, and fishing when I have the time.

Favorite Books: Hunger Games, Autobiographies of different musicians. I just finished the autobiography of Dave Grohl, by far one of the best autobiographies I have read.

Personal hero and why: Mother, hands down. She was able to raise 3 teenagers by herself and did it with a smile on her face and with great integrity. No matter what the situation was, she always saw good in people and lived by two words; "Be Nice". She passed away in Feb 2010 but I will never forget those two simple words and will always live by them. "Be Nice."

What animal best represents you and why? LOL.....if I had to pick one.....i'd say Cookie Monster, he's kind of an animal. Because I love cookies, that is my one weakness.

What is your greatest strength? One of my greatest strengths is being adaptable. Having an attitude that allows me to adapt to different situations has helped me become a better coach and teacher.

Interesting fact about yourself: When I'm not coaching or teaching, you can find me playing music full time. I've been drumming for bands in Austin for the last 10 years and have played all genres of music from country, r & B, to rock n roll. I've played drums for many different artists and have played drums on multiple different albums, gone on tours, and been in music videos. I love music and the creativity that comes along with it. Music is a great outlet for the hustle and bustle that comes with teaching and coaching.

Why do you work at EAPrep: It is a great opportunity for me to help facilitate change in the lives of our youth in East Austin.

Center for Mexican American Studies

The first CMAS Faculty Book Plática features David L. Leal co-editor, along with José E. Limón, of the collection, Migration and the Border: Politics and Policy in the New Latino Century (University of Notre Dame Press, 2013).

The volume addresses immigration and border politics and policies, focusing on the U.S. side of the border. The two chapters in the first section of the book set the stage and discuss the binational lives of Mexican migrants; chapters in the subsequent sections highlight specific political and policy themes: civic engagement, public policies, political reactions against immigrants, and immigrant leadership. Because the immigration experience encompasses many facets of political life and public policy, the varied perspectives of the contributors offer a mosaic that contextualizes the impact of and contributions by contemporary Latino immigrants. Their research will appeal not only to scholars but to policymakers and the public and will inform contentious debates about migration and migrants.

A panel of commentators featuring Professor Ricardo Ainslie (Department of Educational Psychology, UT Austin), Dr. Daphny Ainslie (Independent Psychologist), and Professor Harriet Romo (Department of Sociology, UT San Antonio) will join Professor Leal to discuss the book.

50 Years Ago Juan Cornejo Crystal City, Texas When They

Last month we heard a lot about the 50th anniversary of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. Almost every television station carried not only the remembrance but also a feature story elsewhere in the broadcast. Many of us who are old enough can still recall where we were on that fateful day in Dallas, Texas.

What many of us might not recall is another event out of a much smaller Texas town called Crystal City. For it was in this town of 8,000, that Juan Cornejo and a group of friends ran for and won positions on the Crystal City City Council.

Los Cinco as they were called, stunned the local power structure when they took the majority of the votes cast on April 2nd, 1963. (Below is push card from the election.) As can be seen from the card, voters would scratch out the names of the candidates they did not want. Elected were Juan Cornejo, J. Mario Hernandez, Manuel R. Maldonado, Antonio G. Cardenas and Reynaldo Mendoza. According to one of the newspaper clippings, the election of Los Cinco swept out a group that had been in power for 38 years.

So seven years before La Raza Unida Party made headlines in 1970 with its electoral victories for school board and city council, there was this historic event. In a visit to Crystal City a few months ago, I had the pleasure of meeting Juan Cornejo once again. (I had met him once before maybe 15 years ago.) A local activist in Crystal City, Juan Duran, called to my attention that Mr. Cornejo, now in his 80s, had received very little recognition on this 50th anniversary of his election to the city council in the local newspaper. So we decided to make a big deal out of this milestone with this two page spread.

LEFT: Mayor Juan Cornejo who was an assistant business agent for Teamsters Local 657 at the California Packing Company in Crystal City.

ABOVE: LOS CINCO CANDIDATOS: Two workers for the Mexicanos slate display a sign which appeared all over Crystal City urging voters to vote a straight ticket for the five candidates.

and Friends Made History in Were Elected to City Council

During our visit, Mr. Cornejo broke out his photo albums and and we turned on the tape recorder to capture his thoughts and views about all that has transpired over the years. Among his more salient thoughts were how fast events were taking place back in 1963. He of course mentioned the assassination of President Kennedy but also the Civil Rights Movement.

He also spoke about the first time he met Dr. Martin Luther King in Los Angeles, California. Below is photo of Mr. Cornejo with Dr. King. Also in the photo is Tom Bradley (tallest one in the photo) who would later go on to become the Mayor of Los Angeles.

Mr Cornejo said there was no big plan for taking over the city council. He said that Mo Falcon was the guy to organized everything along with PASSO (Political Association of Spanish Speaking Organizations). He said that Falcon came by his house one day and said they had a slate of candidates but needed one more to complete the ticket. Mr. Cornejo said that when they asked him, he said sure, put my name down. He also said, that he was elected Mayor by the slate after they were sworn in during the first meeting.

An Election Analysis of the Seguin

In 2011, the Seguin Independent School District placed before the voters a bond proposal to build a new high school. On election day the voters said NO!

School leaders were left to reflect and ponder why the bond election failed. After two years of deliberation and many conversations, the school board led by Louis Q. Reyes, brought the issue back before the voters again in 2013.

On November 5th, 2013 the voters said YES and the bond election passed with 66% of the vote. Why did the voters reverse themselves? What did they see in 2013 that they did not see in 2011?

By most accounts, the voters changed their minds because they had been educated about the importance of having a new school in Seguin. A committee called SEGUIN 13 and chaired by Carlos Moreno and Dr. Robert P. Stephens put together an aggressive educational campaign that consisted of block walks, canvassing and ads in local publications.

In an area of Seguin designated the Central Region, Vickie de la Rosa helped lead a team that consisted of Daniel and Maria Guerra, Alejandro Guerra and Eddie Davila. In the months prior to the November 5th, election, people went door to door to explain to their neighbors why it was important to turn out and vote for the bond election. For those who were not registered to vote, deputy registrars set up tables to get people registered.

In sum, the victory on election day was due to an old fashion get out the vote campaign by people who were serious and not afraid to work. On these two pages are a series of graphs and table that help to tell the story of what happened in 2011 and 2013. The captions and guiding notes will serve to help the readers interpret and understand what the graphs mean.

Seguin ISD Election Facts

What was on the ballot?

The Seguin ISD proposition was to improve and construct a new high school.

Cost: 78.3 million dollars

What were the results of the November 5, 2013 Seguin ISD Special Election?

There were 5,783 votes cast and 5,745 were canvassed. Of the 5,745 votes:

3,830 voted FOR (66.67%)
1,915 voted AGAINST (33.33%)

SOURCE: Guadalupe County Elections Office

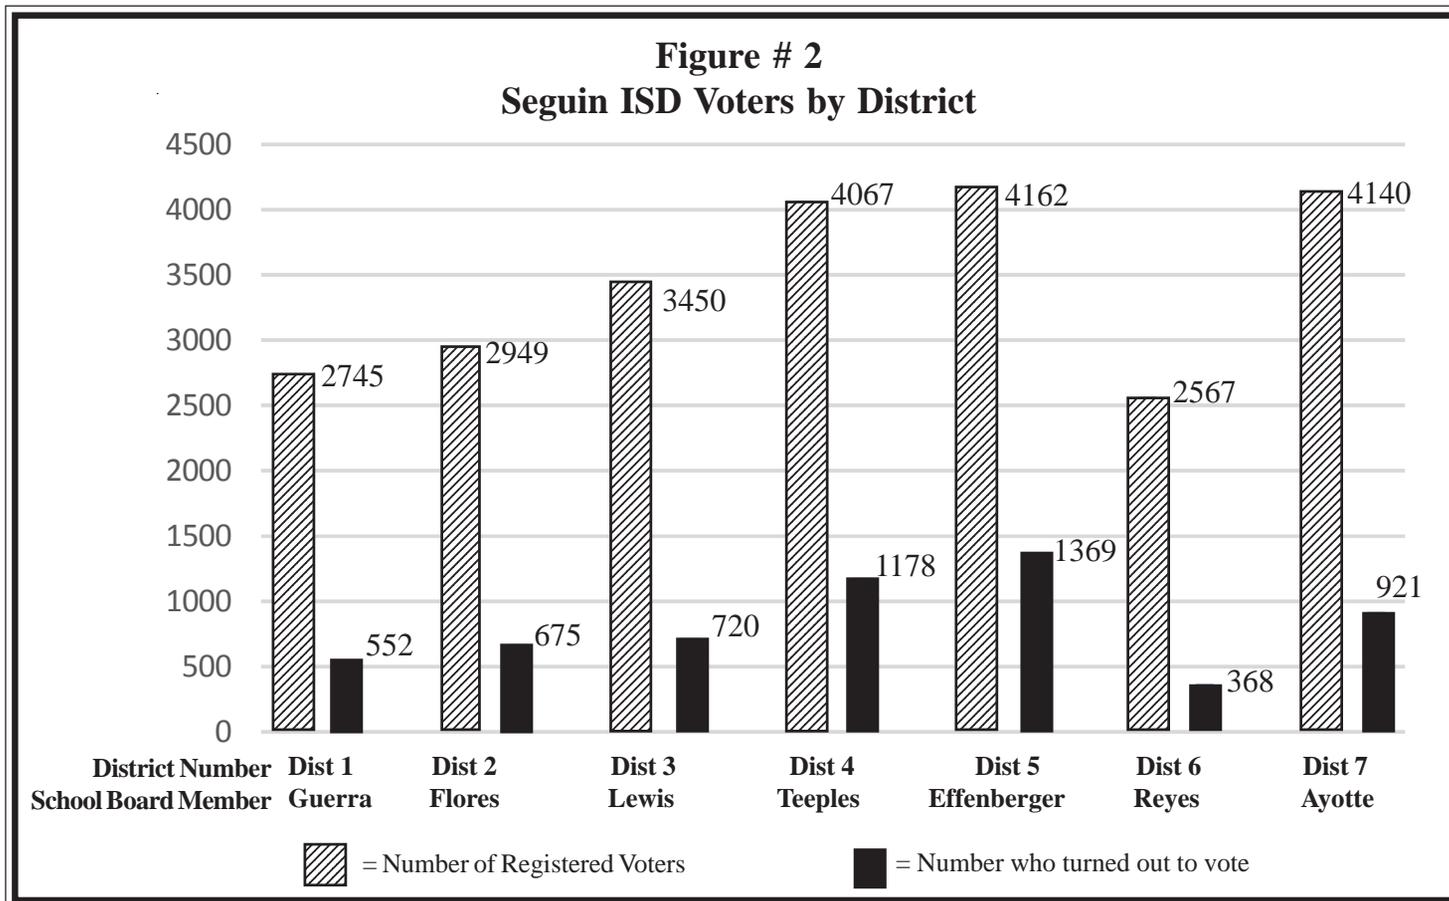

Figure # 1 contains two statements. The first tells what was on the ballot. The second statement provides the election results on the bond issue for November 5th, 2013.

In the Seguin Independent School District there are seven (7) school board members who are elected by districts. Figure # 2 contains a breakdown by district of the number of registered voters and the number of people who actually turned out to vote. As Figure # 2 reveals, voter turn out was low. Out of a total of 24,075 registered voters, only 5,783 turned out to vote. Stated differently, only 24% of the voters in the Seguin Independent School District cast their votes.

Figure # 3 shows the Hispanic voter turn out in the November 5th, 2013 election. Again, it is broken down by school board member districts. Using District 1 as an example, out of the 552 voters who went to the polls, 208 had Spanish surnames. In District # 2, 675 voters cast their ballots of which 234 were identified as Spanish surname.

Taken all together, out of the 5,783 votes cast in the school bond election, 1,188 were identified as Spanish surname. 20% of the voters in the November 5th, 2013 bond election were Hispanic.

1,188 Hispanic Voters Turned out for the 2013 School Bond Election

Independent School District Bond Election

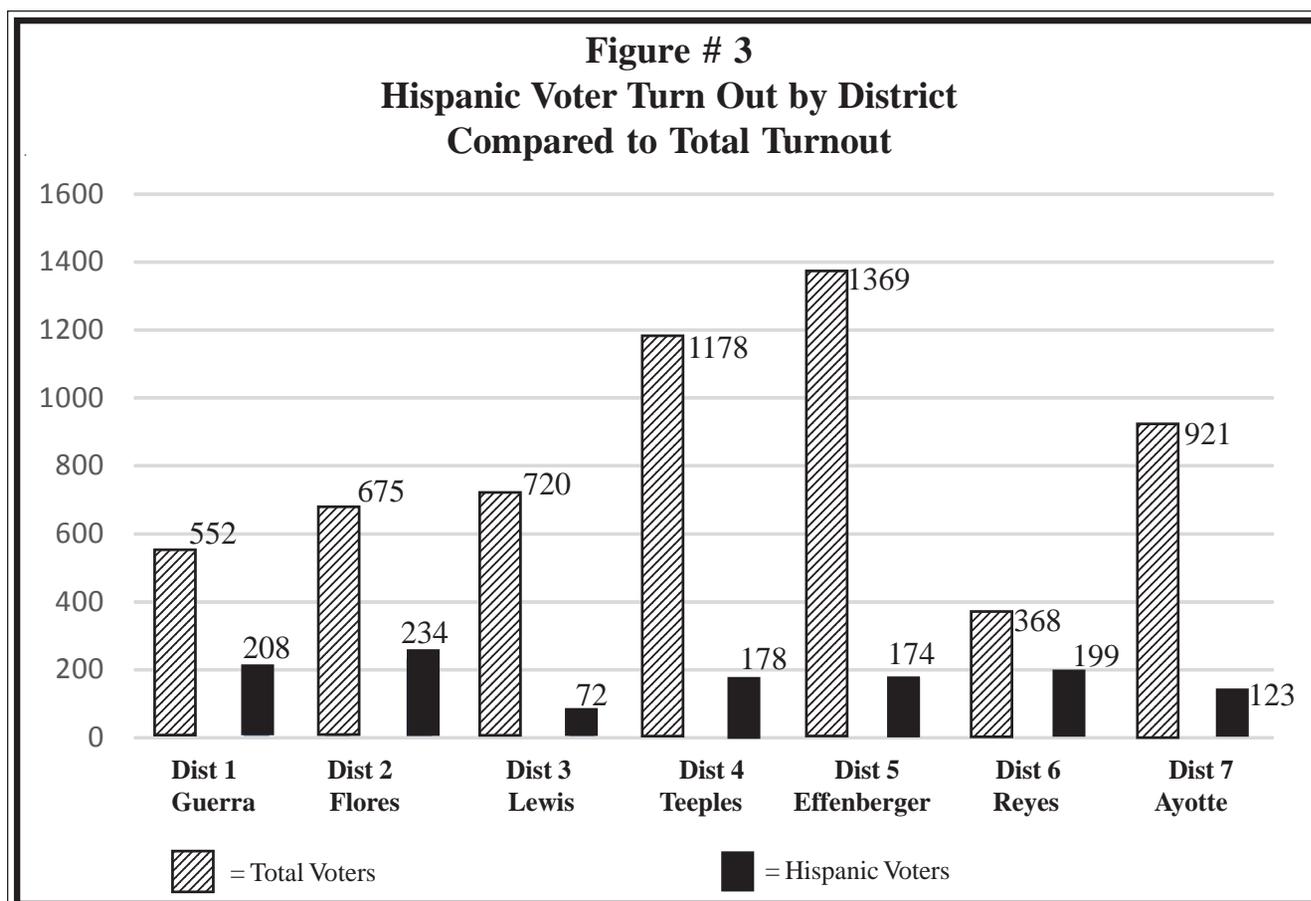

The really interesting part of this analysis comes from a comparison of the election results of the 2011 bond election and the 2013 bond election. In each case, the same issue is before the voters.

In 2011 the number of registered voters eligible to vote in the Seguin Independent School District bond election was 23,732. This was about 348 less voters than the 24,080 who were eligible to vote in 2013.

1,767 More Voters Turned Out to Vote in the 2013 School Board Election

The number of voters who turned out to vote in the 2011 school bond election was 4,016. This was 1,767 less voters than the number that turned out to vote in 2013.

Figure # 4 is probably the most interesting figure in this analysis. It shows that in 2011, the number of Spanish surname voters who turned out to vote was 534 and breaks them down by board member districts. In 2013, the number of Spanish surnamed voters who turned out to vote more than doubled to 1,188.

6 LQ Reyes III	63	199	136

SOURCE: Guadalupe County Elections Office

While the number of Hispanic voters more than doubled, it is worth noting that this increase, in relative terms, is still very small compared to total voter turnout. (20%)

Conclusion

Did the increase in the total number of voters make a difference in the election outcome? Did the increase in the number of Hispanic voters in the school bond election make a difference in the outcome in 2013?

The answer cannot be deduced from the data thus far. What can be said is that the "on the ground campaign" effort by the SEGUN 13 committee seemed to be a driving factor in educating the voters about the importance of turning out to vote and voting in favor of the bond election.

"Your vote is your voice"

An Interview with Dr. Mariano Diaz-Miranda

Member of the Citizens Independent Redistricting Committee

La Voz: What was your motivation for applying for consideration as member of the Independent Citizens Redistricting Commission?

Dr. Diaz-Miranda: My primary motivation was to be part of a governmental changing process that would bring a more fair form of representation to the residents of our city. And first, and foremost, bring representation to folks that basically did not have any. The gentlemen's agreement that fueled the structure of the City Council was for all practical purposes a cynical joke played upon about 45% of our residents or almost half of the population in the city—that of course being the Latinos and Blacks.

La Voz: Was this your first time being a member of quasi-political body?

Dr. Diaz-Miranda: Yes! I have never participated in any sort of political function—quasi or otherwise—and never wanted to do so. However, I was extremely happy and grateful to be selected as a member of this historical process that brought about real political representation for a rather large and important part of our community.

La Voz: As the Commission was working on the redistricting, was there a sense that all of you were making history?

Dr. Diaz-Miranda: I have to be extremely honest in answering this question. I do truly believe that most members of the commission did indeed see themselves from the get go, as actors in an extremely significant process to bring about a radical governmental change to the City of Austin. There were others, however, that took a little longer to realize the historical importance of the task they were given and the impact it would have on our City.

La Voz: How many hours a week would you say that you spent working on this Commission?

Dr. Diaz-Miranda: The number of hours varied from week to week, and it also varied with the assignments the commissioners had. I believe that most commissioners would agree that the hours spent to bring this project to fruition was probably more than expected. Many weeks we had three meetings which had to be scheduled in the evenings or the weekends, since most members of the Commission had the primary responsibility of work and family. Some meetings lasted well over six hours, while others were less than three; the average meeting time would be somewhere near four hours. Commissioners also had to prepare themselves for the scheduled meetings, and that was time consuming according to the task at hand. Overall, it felt at times as if one had another job. I probably spent less than most, such as our Chair and Co-Chair, and I would say that easily twenty to thirty hours a week were spent working on the Commission.

La Voz: During all the public hearings, were there any Commission members who were taken aback by the degree of interest of the public?

Dr. Diaz-Miranda: I believe that not only the interest of the public was impactful, but also the passion to which at times we were privileged to witness. I believe that the interest of our residents and the passion that they at times exhibited brought the reality to the Commission as to how our decision would impact thousands of our fellow residents. We took their comments very seriously, and heard their voices loud and clear. I do understand that not all members of our City felt that they were heard. However, I want to clearly and emphatically state that they were. The map that we drew was the fairest redistricting of our beloved City that we could make, even though some of our residents might feel otherwise.

La Voz: What surprised you the most about how the Commission developed as a group during the deliberations?

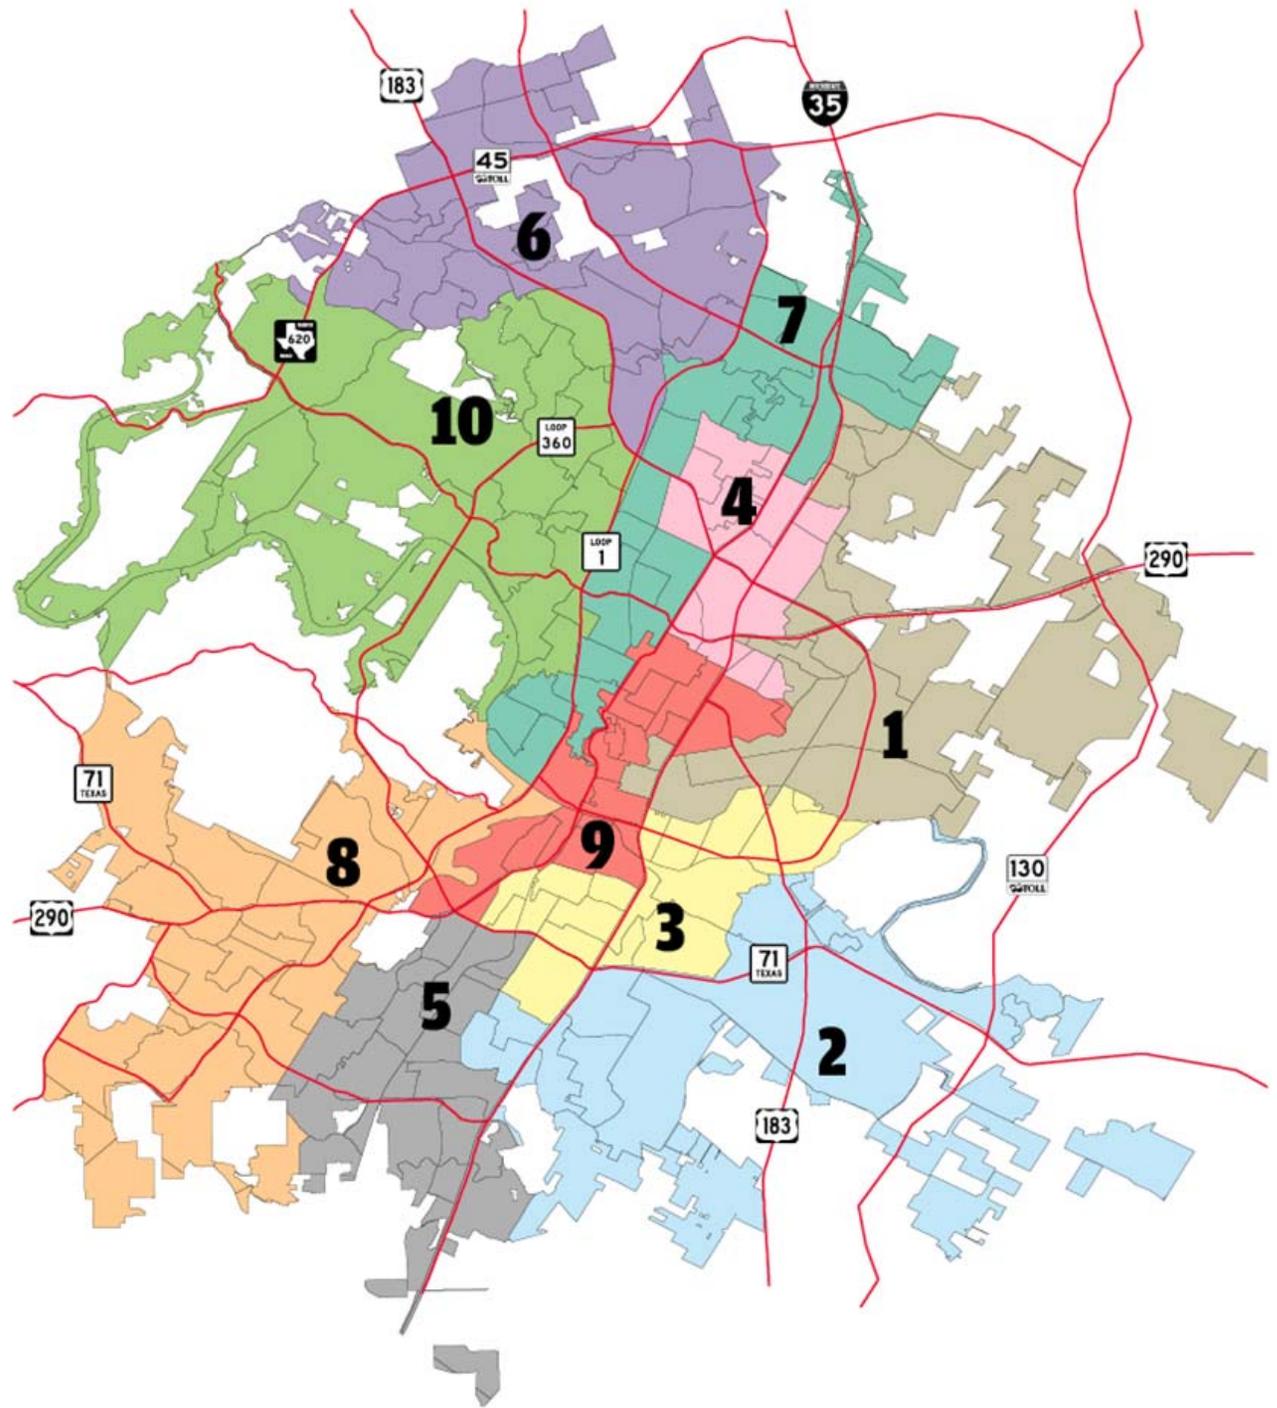

Dr. Diaz-Miranda: What surprised me most, and at the same time filled me with pride to be a member of this group, was how totally devoted the group was to the task at hand. Even though from the very beginning the differences of outlook and opinion among the members was obvious, the group became one in its task to bring fair representation to our City.

La Voz: The final map for the 10 city council districts has been completed. Does the commission have to submit them to any agency for final approval?

Dr. Diaz-Miranda: NO! NO! and again NO! This final map that the Commission has drawn needs no approval of any governmental agency within the City of Austin or the State of Texas. The only governmental body that has the right to look at it would be the Federal Government through the Office of the Attorney General in Washington D.C. And we are extremely sure that our map will pass with flying colors the fairness of our redistricting. Let me make this perfectly clear, this redistricting map is now the law of the land in the City of Austin. Come next election in November of 2014, fair and just representation will be enjoyed by ALL members of our City.

La Voz: Now that your job is going to be officially over, what was the biggest lesson you learned?

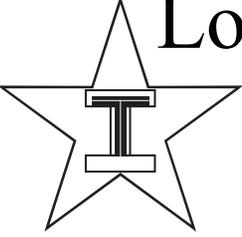

Dr. Diaz-Miranda: I have learned that historical change does not take place fast, and at times it is extremely painful. I have also learned that folks need to see clearly down the road what this change will mean to the future residents of their neighborhood, city, state, or country, and if they believe that it is a positive change they have to keep trying until they bring that change about.

Pensamientos de Ernesto Nieto

So I'm some where in Central Texas and run across a woman who works night and day to keep her family together, fed, and sheltered. Her husband, originally from Mexico, abandoned here 2 years ago. She's U.S. born. But here's the thing...Her kids are really bright, really smart. Together they live in the back of a warehouse in conditions hard to imagine. Yet the oldest girl, who is 15 years old, carries herself around with a lot of dignity and pride. No one could ever tell that she comes from a really poor background. "So what kind of grades do you make in school?" I ask.

"Basically straight A's," she responds with a curious look in her eyes.

"I don't believe you," I shot back, looking straight into her eyes to see if she would in anyway back off.

She got lost and in a few seconds came running back out from where she lived with a report card. She put it in my hands, so that I could personally read her academic performance. The young girl was right.

"So you're coming to the LDZ," I responded, while continuing to look at her grades, being careful not to give her any other indication.

"What's that?" came the question.

"Don't worry," I respond. "It's something you will never forget the rest of your life." Tomorrow an intern will be asked to drive all the way to where she lives. Somehow we will make due and insure that she attends. And when she does, the magic of the LDZ experience will take her one strong step closer in realizing dreams that up to now have been beyond her imagined reach....Thank you NHI....

Dedication to personal excellence, a strong belief in family and culture, and service to others are the core values and beliefs that drive the work of the Institute and embrace its vision.

La Pastorela

La Pastorela is a “uniquely Austin” holiday tradition that has been entertaining audiences for 14 years. It is a traditional Yuletide play performed in Native American/Latino Communities since the late 16th century when Spanish missionary priests first introduced the act to Native Aztec Indians. The original script and music, passed on from generation to generation, recount the shepherd’s journey to Bethlehem as they encounter manifestations of evil that attempt to keep them from reaching their destination.

Each year’s production retains elements of the original tradition, but adds a lively bilingual contemporary theatrical twist to the overall performance of the dialogue, music and dance. Different versions of La Pastorela have been produced in Austin for decades by different production teams under the umbrella of ALTA and this year is not the exception.

What is ALTA?

ALTA (Austin Latino Theater Alliance) was born 14 years ago with the intention of uniting and supporting the different Latino and Hispanic theater groups in the community. As such, the organization contributed to maintaining the tradition and community production of La Pastorela, a traditional nativity play, and also supported the diverse artistic and cultural projects.

Today, ALTA has been reborn as a community of artists and volunteers who are firmly committed to fostering the development of new talents in the theater arts, promoting collaborative productions among local and international artists, and bringing the highest quality theater to the Austin audiences.

This commitment stems from a desire to bring Hispanic/Latin American plays and productions whose language, be it Spanish or English, speaks to the universal emotions and beliefs that transcends cultural, social and geopolitical barriers, and which are rooted in the commonality of the human experience. Our work seeks to challenge the preconceptions of what is Latino theater, and become a source of inspiration and redemption that goes beyond activism and folklore. ALTA believes that the art of theatre is a cultural force with the capacity to transform the lives of individuals and society at large.

As the Christmas season approaches and the television begins to blast the viewers with commercials of the latest products that must go under their Christmas tree, we thought it would be instructive to remind our readers that Christmas is but one kind of religious celebration. This simple chart shows a few of the 4,200 religions around the world and some of the basic tenants that form its belief system.

A Quick Primer on Religion:

Religion is an organized collection of beliefs, cultural systems, and world views that relate humanity to an order of existence. Many religions have narratives, symbols, and sacred histories that are intended to explain the meaning of life and/or to explain the origin of life or the Universe. From their beliefs about the cosmos and human nature, people derive morality, ethics, religious laws or a preferred lifestyle. According to some estimates, there are roughly 4,200 religions in the world.

Many religions may have organized behaviors, clergy, a definition of what constitutes adherence or membership, holy places, and scriptures. The practice of a religion may also include rituals, sermons, commemoration or veneration of a deity, gods or goddesses, sacrifices, festivals, feasts, trance, initiations, funerary services, matrimonial services, meditation, prayer, music, art, dance, public service or other aspects of human culture. Religions may also contain mythology.

The word religion is sometimes used interchangeably with faith, belief system or sometimes set of duties; however, in the words of Émile Durkheim, religion differs from private belief in that it is "something eminently social". A global 2012 poll reports that 59% of the world's population is religious, and 36% are not religious, including 13% who are atheists, with a 9 percent decrease in religious belief from 2005. On average, women are more religious than men. Some people follow multiple religions or multiple religious principles at the same time, regardless of whether or not the religious principles they follow traditionally allow for syncretism.

Recordando a Yolanda

Yolanda Rosenbaum-Collins, 57, beloved wife, mother, sister, aunt, and friend entered into the glory of her eternal life on Wednesday, November 06, 2013, at Valley Regional Medical Center in Brownsville, Texas surrounded by her loving family after a brief but valiant battle against cancer.

Yoli, as she was affectionately known to all, had been a lifetime resident of Brownsville although she was born in Rio Grande City. Yoli grew up and was raised and proud to call "La Southmost" home. La Southmost knew no greater advocate than Yoli and to some she was known as "La Riena de la Southmost."

Together with her sister, Viola, they were the co-founders and owners of Rosenbaum Flowers. Yoli was a Texas Master Florist and at one time served as President of the Texas Florist Association. Yoli was a founder of the Brownsville Beautification committee for the Southmost area and also a member of the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce. She was the founder of the Veterans Day Committee that led to the organization of the Veterans Day Parade which is celebrating its 14th Annual parade this year.

But Yoli's passion in life was her family. She was a single mother who was completely devoted to her daughter. There was never a moment in her daughter's life that she was not there to support her and share in her accomplishments. Yoli was the proudest mother ever just over a year ago, as she walked her "little girl" down the aisle. She was a devoted sister and aunt and she made every effort to keep the family united. Yoli was a longtime parishioner at Christ the King Catholic Church.

Yoli was blessed a little over a year ago to meet Larry D. Collins who fell head over heels in love with her at first sight. After pursuing her for a short time, Yoli gave in and soon they were both madly in love. In December of last year, they were married and these past eleven months have been the happiest months of Yoli's life. She was so thankful to God for having brought Larry into her life. For those of us who were guests at their wedding or in their home afterwards, their love was truly evident and it was a joy to be around them both. Larry and Tammy's love, faith, support and courage together with Yoli's faith in God helped to sustain her in the past five months after her diagnosis with cancer. Yoli was deeply loved and will be profoundly missed not only by her family and friends but by all those fortunate to have known her.

Waiting to welcome her home at heaven's gate were her parents, Antonia and Lucino Rosenbaum Sr., her sister, Viola Rosenbaum and her brother, Juan Jose Rosenbaum. Left behind to eternally treasure their memories of Yoli are her husband of a year, Larry D. Collins; the daughter that was her pride and joy, Tammy Olivares and her husband Carlos; a step-daughter, Larresse Collins; her four brothers: Heriberto (Leticia) Rosenbaum, Armando (Ramona) Rosenbaum, Lucino (Beatrice) Rosenbaum Jr., and Dr. Rene (Mary Beth) Rosenbaum PhD; two brothers-in-law: Al and Rob Collins and numerous nieces, nephews, friends, and other extended family members.

Preguntas y Respuestas de Social Security

AVÍSELE AL SEGURO SOCIAL ANTES DE VIAJAR AL EXTRANJERO

Por Jose M Olivero

Especialista de relaciones públicas del Seguro Social en Oklahoma City

El famoso escritor Mark Twain, una vez aconsejó, “Atrapa los vientos alisios en tus velas. Explora. Sueña. Descubre.”

Las personas hoy en día toman este consejo muy en serio y están visitando lugares en todo el mundo—a menudo de vacaciones y a veces para establecerse en otro país. Si usted es una de estas personas y recibe los beneficios de Seguro Social, tenemos una página de Internet especial dedicada a este tema: «Sus pagos mientras esté fuera de los Estados Unidos». En esa página de Internet puede encontrar respuestas a preguntas tales como: «¿se afectarán mis beneficios de Seguro Social? ¿Tengo que avisarle al Seguro Social que estoy fuera del país? ¿Cuándo debo hacerlo? ¿Qué pasa si necesito comunicarme con el Seguro Social mientras estoy de viajes?»

Las respuestas estas preguntas, y aún más Puede encontrar respuestas a todas, en www.segurosocial.gov/international/payments.html (solo disponible en inglés). Este sitio de Internet ofrece una sección acerca de “Payments Abroad Screening Tool” (Herramienta para investigar si puede recibir sus beneficios en el extranjero [solo disponible en inglés]) y le plantea un par de preguntas para determinar si usted podrá continuar recibiendo sus beneficios.

Esta página también encontrará enlaces a publicaciones, tales como, Sus pagos mientras está fuera de los Estados Unidos, la cual explica cómo sus beneficios se pueden afectar y otra información importante que necesita saber si recibe los beneficios de Seguro Social y viaja a otro país.

Otra cosa importante que debe tener en cuenta es que si recibe los beneficios de Seguro Social como dependiente o sobreviviente, también existen requisitos adicionales de residencia en los Estados Unidos que pueden influir en el pago de sus beneficios mientras viaja.

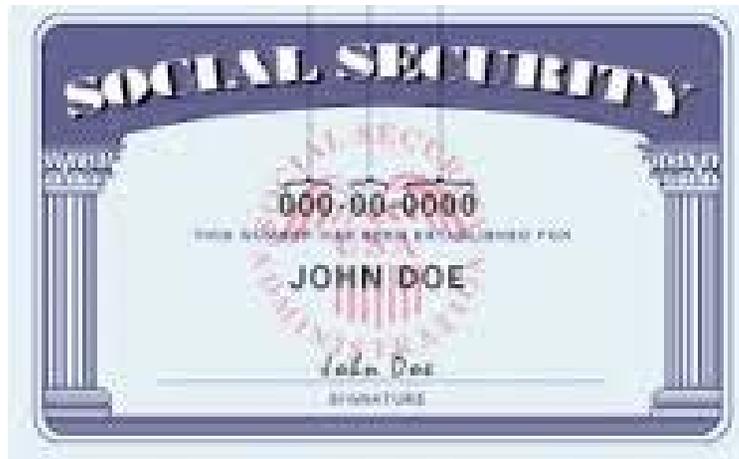

Por otro lado, es importante tomar nota de las diferentes estipulaciones que afectan a aquellas personas que reciben los beneficios de Seguridad de Ingreso Suplementario (SSI). Tan pronto la persona cumple más de 30 días consecutivos fuera de los Estados Unidos, dicha persona no puede comenzar a recibir los beneficios de SSI otra vez hasta que la persona haya regresado a los Estados Unidos por más 30 días consecutivos. Existen estipulaciones específicas para hijos de soldados quienes tienes que residir fuera de los Estados Unidos, al igual que excepciones para estudiantes que viajan al extranjero para estudiar.

Así que, si recibe los beneficios de Seguro Social y planifica viajar o vivir fuera de los Estados Unidos, lo primero que debe hacer es visitar la página de Internet, www.segurosocial.gov/international/payments.html.

CHECK IN WITH SOCIAL SECURITY BEFORE TRAVELING OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES

By Jose M Olivero

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist in Oklahoma City

Mark Twain once advised people to “Catch the trade winds in your sails. Explore. Dream. Discover.”

Americans today have taken that advice to heart, and are visiting places around the globe—often for vacations, and sometimes to relocate in another country. If you are one of these people and receive Social Security benefits, we offer a special website: “Social Security Payments Outside the United States.” Here you can find answers to such questions as “will my Social Security payments be affected? Do I have to let Social Security know I’m out of the country? When should I do it? What happens if I need to contact Social Security while I am out of the country?”

You can find answers to all of these questions and others at www.socialsecurity.gov/international/payments.html. The website features a “Payments Abroad Screening Tool”, which asks you a few short questions to determine if your payments can continue.

The page also offers links to publications, such as Your Payments While You Are Outside The United States, which explains how your benefits may be affected and other important information you need to know about receiving Social Security benefits while outside the country.

And one more important point to note. If you receive Social Security benefits as a dependent or survivor there are additional United States residency requirements that may affect your benefit payments while you are outside the United States.

It also is important to note that there are different provisions for anyone receiving Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefits. Once you have been outside the United States for 30 or more days in a row, your SSI cannot start again until you have been back in the country for at least 30 consecutive days. There are special rules for dependent children of military personnel who leave the United States and exceptions for students studying abroad.

So if you receive Social Security or SSI benefits and are planning to travel or live outside the United States, you’ll first want to pay a visit to www.socialsecurity.gov/international/payments.html

Saying Good-bye to Sam

by Alfredo R. Santos c/s

On November 11th, 2013, Sam Coronado went to meet the creator. It was a sudden departure and took many of us by shock and surprise. He was doing an art show in Ft. Wayne, Indiana and by all accounts, he was doing what is like the best, sharing his work with others.

Many of Sam's friends showed up at the funeral home on November 19th on North Lamar in Austin, Texas for the memorial service. After the kind words of the Rev. Dr. Jayme Mathias, twenty or so of Sam's friends and family made their way to the podium and shared their sentiments with the hundreds who came to say good-bye.

I didn't know Sam that well, but I knew that he was a long time activist and well liked by many in the community. I saw people at the funeral home who came from Houston, (Jesus Medel, Lorenzo Cano and others). There were also many who came from San Antonio, from South Bend, Indiana, came Dolores Garcia, and from UC Berkeley came Dr. David Montejano. There were also lot of artists in the crowd.

And then there was Jill, Sam's wife. Most everyone made their way to her to exchange words of condolence or shock at the sudden passing of Sam. I was one of them.

That evening there was a celebration of Sam's life at the Serie Project headquarters in Montopolis. Food began to appear and people came walking up from all different directions. All of the conversations and reunions that I overheard had a common theme: How Sam had come into each person's life. Everyone had a good story to share about when they first met Sam how their friendship with him grew over the years.

As a cultural activist Sam Coronado left an indelible mark on many people. With his friends Sylvia Orozco and Pio Pulido he helped to found Mexic-Arte Museum in 1984. He taught at Austin Community College and he taught many people his techniques. After two printmaking residencies at Self-Help Graphics in East Los Angeles, Sam founded Coronado Studio in 1991. His painting and printmaking have been the subject of many exhibitions and publications across the United States, Mexico, Europe and Africa. In 2012, the Austin Visual Arts Association presented Sam with the Lifetime Achievement Award.

I don't know about you, but it seems to me that a guy like Sam Coronado is someone who will remain in your mind and heart for a long, long time. He is someone you never really say good-bye to.

To continue the work and memory of Sam Coronado, the family would like to invite you to make a donation to the Serie Project in his honor in order to continue his legacy. Please call 512-385-3591, email serie@serieproject.org, or send a check to 6603 Felix Avenue, Austin, Texas 78741.
