Aguilar Inducted Into Inaugural EducationShift20

Amara Aguilar was inducted into the inaugural Educationshift20 class in December of 2017. Educationshift20 is new program that has become the premier destination for insight and analysis at the intersection of media and technology.

Aguilar, who is an associate professor of professional practice in digital journalism at the University of Southern California Annenberg School for Communication and Journalism.

Aguilar's impact on emerging journalistic innovations is multifaceted, as her nominators mentioned her launch of "Dimelo," a social media news outlet for a Latinx audience; her implementation of innovative, digital-centered university programs that are inclusive and experiential; as well as her creation of the JEDI Desk, which is built around the concept of digital innovation.

Aguilar is passionate about including diverse voices in journalism. She crafted a class where the focus was social media storytelling for Latino audiences, and as her student Tomas Antonio noted, its bilingual content demonstrates how Aguilar "goes out of her way to help students one on one. ... Prof. Amara Aguila has been an inspiration for me."

Rick Fuentes Steps it Up Another Notch con La Musica

A familiar face with a fresh sound is about to step out of the shadow of legend and carry forth his family legacy.

Rick Fuentes, Grammy Award-winning accordionist, arranger and producer, will be striking out on his own after over 20 years alongside Tejano icon Ruben Ramos as an integral member of the Mexican Revolution to form the next generation of his father's group, the legendary Brown Express.

With this new project, Rick will craft a new signature sound, spreading his wings as bandleader, arranger and producer, vocalist and accordionist.

Backing him up on every track is the newest incarnation of Brown Express, a group of gifted musicians filled with energy and desire to make great music with one of Tejano music's hardest working, most dedicated and talented professionals.

Born and raised in San Jose, California, with family roots in south Texas, Rick's natural musical ability became obvious at an early age. His father, Ricardo "Richard" Fuentes, played button accordion and Farfisa organ for the iconic chicano band, Brown Express. As a child, Rick would pore over each recording, picking out the keyboard parts and playing them on his own.

Tragedy struck in 1983 when Richard was on tour with Brown Express and the band was involved in a rollover accident. Richard and another band member were killed. As one would expect, young Rick was deeply affected by his father's death, not only because he was his father, but also his musical mentor. After some initial doubts, Rick turned his grief into resolve and inspiration and embarked on a musical career his father would have been proud of.

Rick spent his early years with the legendary accordionist and Brown Express alumna Chavela Ortiz Hernandez with her new band, Grupo Express. It was a dream gig for him, especially since the sound was reminiscent of his dad's era with Brown Express. Sadly, he only spent a few years with Chavela, before her accidental death.

After spending a couple of decades further developing his skills and talents alongside Ramos (who became like a second father to him) and a brief stint with Hugo Guerrero and Fandango USA, Rick feels it is time to step out of the shadows and not only carry on his father's legacy, but create one of his own at the same time. The future is bright and it's time for Rick Fuentes & Brown Express to shine. Look for brand new material and official announcements in early 2018.

THROUGH TIME AND SPACE...Ernesto

During WWII... I sat out back on the porch of our home in Houston as a five year old quietly listening to my parents and the old folks reminisce individual tales of their lives, the desperation of the times, the loneliness of their journeys, their tragedies, as they silently moved through time and space in a world devoid of justice.

When In High School... I noted the truths in these stories, witnessing preferential treatment based on race and skin color, the sound of one's last name, where we lived in town, what our parents did for work, and what we had or didn't have in material goods.

While in College... Resentment began swelling inside, realizing that some people had opportunities that others didn't like affording college, pursuing careers, and having the encouragements that led to success. There was a particular distaste that came from knowing that my grandparents, parents, siblings, relatives, and friends never had a chance in life, not because they didn't want to better themselves, but because of circumstances against them.

As a Young Man Entering the Adult World... My firsthand experience of unfairness and inequality drove me to join the resistance efforts in my community, eventually becoming part of the protest movement to help correct why those who looked like me as citizens were treated un-American while others received and expected special privileges and advantages because of who they were and the advantages of their cultural heritage.

As a Young Professional... The emotional and psychological drain of the Civil Rights Movement took its toll on my spirits, outlooks, and energies along with thousands of others no longer able to sustain the fight. During a moment of looking back for support, the reality of the times were both evident and discouraging. The social landscape had been weakened by the struggle, no longer able to supply the human intelligence needed to carry onward.

Towards My Middle Years... After spending many waking hours of thought on what pathway to follow next, the idea of a school, "una escuela," as my father would say, could be established to supply the future Latino community with long term sources of well trained, better educated, and more articulate leaders in preparation for a modern day era. It was also then that my pathway crossed a more youthful, highly enthusiastic mindset where everything was possible against a more cautious, more deliberate way of viewing and conducting life.

For the Next Several Generations... New and different thoughts and concepts on leadership were tested for their viability throughout the Latino community across the United States to assess the best means of influencing young minds to embrace leadership as an integral part of their development and vision. Leadership could not be a means of achieving notoriety and gaining control over others; instead it had to be used to influence change through deeds that transformed lives and fostered healthy, self-determining communities.

As Time Moved Forward... Our energies focused on mobilizing and engaging former students of the National Hispanic Institute to fully understand and embrace the mission as the organization's official messengers responsible for transmitting the work, casting the net as wide as possible to engage new young thinkers, and make the message of conscientious and ethical community leadership a fundamental value in the lives of young people.

In My Older Years... Efforts are now being directed on establishing the infrastructure, expertise, and systems needed for long-term sustainability that ensure the mission's viability and capacities to prevail through time, so that the vision of establishing a continuous and plentiful flow of fresh human intelligence may continue.

So That in the Timelessness of This Journey... Latino children of tomorrow and the distant future who sit at the feet of their parents and elders listening to their past

ABOUT

Jolt is building a movement of Latinos across Texas to ensure that our community is treated with the respect we deserve. We build the collective voice, power and influence of our community so that our families are treated with equality and dignity.

What we believe is simple — Texas and our democracy are stronger when everyone has a seat at the table and when our voices and families are treated with equality and respect. For too long our community and our contributions have been ignored. The hard work and sacrifices of our families and parents have been belittled by some — calling us “rapists,” “diseased” and “criminals.” We are tired of this hate and are standing up to take back our state and democracy, so that it works for hardworking and honest families like our own. We stand for respect, family and equality.

Saying Good-bye to a Dear Friend

by Olga Muñoz Rodriguez

April 24th, 1936
January 5th, 2018

Today, (January 10th, 2018) in my hometown of Uvalde, we say goodbye to a dear friend, Gilbert Torres. Those of us that lived during the awakening of the Mexican-American community to improve our lives there have fond memories of the tenacity that Gilbert inspired in us. He was a sweet and humble man who stood up first for clean water for the Burns Addition.

At that time the water was provided by the owner/developer John Burns. People were getting sick and eventually it was determined that the water contained amoebas. After years of protests led by Gilbert, the Burns Addition got city water. Gilbert made that possible.

He was humiliated many times, especially by the school boards of his time, but Gilbert was stubbornly proud and determined to bring about change, and he did.

Gilbert was a community organizer who registered people to vote and walked many a protest march, all for the love of his people. The battle for equality in every aspect of our lives was very difficult because the anglo establishment held all the cards: all government entities and programs were run by anglos, from the Selective Service (when it existed) which decided which young men would be exempted from going to war and which would not. As expected, Mexican-Americans, by an overwhelming majority, fought and died in Vietnam. Anglos decided how our schools were maintained, how our children were educated and what public works were enacted. Our side of town always got the least attention, even though we all paid taxes, we all contributed to the town, we were always treated badly. Most of our jobs were provided by anglos, who would threaten anyone that dared to run for public office or participated in voicing their opinion. Gilbert fought and fought to make things right. His family knows his story better than anyone of us and must be so proud of him.

Many of our young people today have no idea how bad things were and probably do not know who Gilbert Torres was. I encourage you to talk to the few elders that still remember him. Newspapers of his time show how Gilbert fought for us, how he was treated and what his efforts made possible. Richard and I had planned to go to his services but illness is keeping us at home. We will be there in spirit and we send all our love and prayers to County Commissioner Gilbert Torres. May he rest in peace.

Olga Muñoz Rodriguez was an activist in Uvalde and at one time the publisher of El Uvalde Times, a community based newspaper. She currently lives in San Antonio, Texas.

Here's Five Reasons to Use Direct Deposit for a Tax Refund

As taxpayers prepare for the January 29 start of filing season, they should consider a direct deposit of any refunds due. It's easy, safe, fast — and the best way to get a refund. That's why 80 percent of taxpayers choose it every year.

IRS Direct Deposit:

Is Fast. The quickest way for taxpayers to get their refund is to electronically file their federal tax return and use direct deposit. They can use IRS Free File to prepare and e-file federal returns for free. Taxpayers who file a paper return can also use direct deposit.

Is Secure. Since refunds go right into a bank account, there's no risk of having a paper check stolen or lost. This is the same electronic transfer system that deposits nearly 98 percent of all Social Security and Veterans Affairs benefits into millions of accounts.

Is Easy. Choosing direct deposit is easy. With e-file, just follow the instructions in the tax software. For paper returns, the tax form instructions serve as a guide. Make sure to enter the correct bank account and routing number.

Has Options. Taxpayers can split a refund into several financial accounts. These include checking, savings, health, education and certain retirement accounts. Use IRS Form 8888, Allocation of Refund (including Savings Bond Purchases), to deposit a refund in up to three accounts. Do not use this form to designate part of a refund to pay tax preparers.

Taxpayers should deposit refunds into accounts in their own name, their spouse's name or both. Avoid making a deposit into accounts owned by others. Some banks require both spouses' names on the account to deposit a tax refund from a joint return. Taxpayers should check with their bank for direct deposit rules. There is a limit of three electronic direct deposit refunds made into a single financial account or pre-paid debit card. The IRS will send a notice and a refund check in the mail to taxpayers who exceed the limit.

Cinco razones para usar depósito directo para un reembolso de impuestos

Cinco razones para usar depósito directo para un reembolso de impuestos

A medida que los contribuyentes se preparan para el inicio de la temporada de impuestos el 29 de enero, deben considerar un depósito directo (en inglés) para cualquier reembolso adeudado. Es fácil, seguro, rápido y la mejor manera de obtener un reembolso. Es por eso que el 80 por ciento de los contribuyentes lo eligen todos los años.

Depósito directo del IRS:

Es rápido. La manera más rápida para que los contribuyentes obtengan su reembolso es presentar electrónicamente su declaración de impuestos federales y usar el depósito directo. Pueden usar Free File del IRS para preparar y presentar electrónicamente declaraciones federales de forma gratuita. Los contribuyentes que presentan una declaración en papel también pueden usar el depósito directo.

Es seguro. Como los reembolsos van directamente a una cuenta bancaria, no hay riesgo de que se le robe o pierda un cheque en papel. Este es el mismo sistema de transferencia electrónica que deposita casi el 98 por ciento de todos los beneficios de Seguro Social y Asuntos de Veteranos en millones de cuentas.

Es fácil. Elegir depósito directo es fácil. Con e-file, solo siga las instrucciones en el software de impuestos. Para las declaraciones en papel, las instrucciones del formulario tributario sirven de guía. Asegúrese de ingresar los números correctos de cuenta bancaria y de ruta.

Tiene opciones. Los contribuyentes pueden dividir un reembolso en varias cuentas financieras. Estos incluyen cuentas de cheques, ahorros, salud, educación y ciertas cuentas de retiro. Use el Formulario 8888 del IRS, Asignación de reembolso (incluidas las compras de bonos de ahorro), para depositar un reembolso en hasta tres cuentas. No use este formulario para designar parte de un reembolso para pagar a preparadores de impuestos.

Los contribuyentes deben depositar los reembolsos en las cuentas en su nombre, el nombre de su cónyuge o ambos. Evite hacer un depósito en cuentas de otros. Algunos bancos requieren los nombres de ambos cónyuges en la cuenta para depositar un reembolso de impuestos de una declaración conjunta. Los contribuyentes deben consultar con su banco las reglas de depósito directo. Hay un límite (en inglés) de tres reembolsos de depósito electrónico en una única cuenta financiera o tarjeta de débito prepaga. El IRS enviará un aviso y un cheque de reembolso por correo a los contribuyentes que se excedan del límite.

Dr. Angela Valenzuela and Growing

Some people complain about things while others try to figure out possible solutions. Angela Valenzuela is doing both. She is part of a growing movement that is critical of the manner in which students of color are being “educated” in the public schools. And she is also part of a pioneering effort to do something about it. (Ella está tratando de hacer los dos.)

As a professor at The University of Texas at Austin in the Department of Education, she is helping to lead an effort to “Grow Your Own Teachers.” She, like a number of others, believe the traditional education preparation programs in many colleges and universities are not stepping up to the challenges of producing teachers who are culturally competent and grounded in an understanding of the importance of a student’s identity.

Here in Austin, Texas, Dr. Valenzuela is a member of Nuestro Grupo, a community based organization that sponsors a Saturday school at the Emma S. Barrientos Mexican American Cultural Center. The school is called “Academia Cuauhtli.” (the Eagle Academy) The elementary students who come from several Eastside Austin public schools receive instruction on the importance of civil rights, cultural arts, local history and indigenous heritage. Valenzuela says that part of the instruction includes introducing students to ancient ways of knowing and experiencing life, family, and community. The school is now entering its third year of operation.

Guided by the idea of revitalizing the Spanish language and Mexican American culture in

Guided by the idea of revitalizing the Spanish language and Mexican American culture in the schools and city, Nuestro Grupo has developed a partnership with the Austin Independent School District to expand a curriculum for multiple subjects for the district’s dual language program. Valenzuela says that the participating teachers the Academia Cuauhtli are rotated to avoid burnout because they all teach full-time in their regular AISD classrooms.

What the Academia Cuauhtli represents in part is a concern that others have voiced over the years, namely that what is being taught is the regular schools is not enough. In Chicago, Illinois, the Consulate General of Poland conducts classes from first grade to high school to complement the curriculum of the American schools. The curriculum includes classes in Polish, history of Poland, geography of Poland and mathematics. In Buffalo, New York, the Polish Saturday School holds classes for students from 5 to 75 years of age and it is an accredited institution and earns three Regents credits honored by every public High School in New York State.

In Austin, Texas, The German-Texan Heritage Society which was founded in 1978 by a group of participants in the Society for German-American Studies’ annual symposium believed that it was time to help preserve the rich cultural heritage of German Americans who first immigrated to

Texas in the 1830s. To accomplish this they now operate the German Saturday School for children from 3 years of age to high school. Classes in German are taught at a variety of levels. Their website describes in detail many of the other programming efforts that are ongoing and concludes with the comment, "We envision that the people of Texas today and in generations to come will be well informed about the cultural values and heritage of German-Texans and that they will embrace the societal benefits of all cultural and heritage diversity within the communities of our State."

A language and culture revitalization project for 4th grade students from Metz, Sanchez, Zavala and Houston Elementary Schools from the Austin Independent School District (AISD). Academia Cuauhtli offers free Saturday classes that are taught in Spanish by AISD master dual language teachers and in the context of a 12-to-1 student-teacher ratio. Academia Cuauhtli is affiliated with Nuestro Grupo- a community-based group organized by the Texas Center for Education Policy and the Tejano Monument Curriculum initiative- and is located at the Emma S. Barrientos, Mexican-American Cultural Center.

As a last example of what others are doing to teach diversity and inclusion of their respective cultures there is the Japanese Saturday School in Fort Wayne, Indiana. Here education is provided in Japanese according to the general curriculum prescribed by the Ministry of Education of Japan, to preschool, primary, and secondary school children. There are opportunities both to Japanese and American children to understand Japanese culture and to gain cross-cultural experiences by teaching them in Japanese with the purpose of helping them to enrich students' lives in their local schools.

To be sure, there are other Saturday schools with other nationalities around the United States and they exist because their founders, like Dr.

Angela Valenzuela have recognized the importance of grounding a child's education in a cultural, historic and linguistic context. As Dr. Valenzuela works to bring about changes in teacher preparation programs so that she can help the "Grow Your Own Teachers" movement, we should expect these Saturday schools is grow and continue to operate.

Strength in numbers: Latino-focused research initiative provides data to help mobile home owners

Jessie Temple

Is it possible to own a home and still be homeless? As mobile home residents in Austin know too well, the answer may be yes. However, with help from data collected by the Latino Research Initiative at The University of Texas at Austin, Austin community stakeholders including the Montopolis Neighborhood Association and PODER (People in Defense of Earth and her Resources) are working to change that.

As the City prepares to adopt CodeNEXT, a comprehensive update to 30-year-old existing land use policies, residents of many mobile home parks find themselves in limbo. These parks, in which most residents own their trailer but rent land, have long provided a more affordable alternative to traditional home ownership. However, with real estate prices rising and the City of Austin supporting increased density in central areas, many developers see mobile home parks as ideal sites for mixed-use developments.

The profit motive may be strong, but Susana Almanza of PODER points to a different kind of number: the strength in numbers that residents gain when they come together in defense of their rights. Almanza and other Austin stakeholders are working for increased protections for mobile home residents, ranging from requirements that residents receive a reasonable amount of time to respond to eviction notices to relocation assistance once that eviction is final.

The University of Texas at Austin Latino Research Initiative

Dr. Deborah Parra-Medina, Director of the Latino Research Initiative, points to mobile home park displacements as an example of a broad public policy issue that tends to disproportionately affect Latino populations. "When we talk about public policy issues in broad language, like 'affordable housing on the Southeast side of Austin,'" says Parra-Medina, "it can be hard to see the people impacted by that discussion. Our job is to shine a light on policy issues that directly impact the Latino community."

The Latino Research Initiative, part of the College of Liberal Arts at The University of Texas at Austin, was launched in 2016 with the mission of "creating and advancing knowledge that sustains healthy and productive environments and promotes social justice for Mexican American and Latina/o communities". In 2017, the Initiative published the Mobile Home Park Affordability Brief.

That study, which notes that 60% of mobile home park residents are Latino (67% are non-white), identifies sixteen mobile home parks of at least five acres within the city limits that are at risk of redevelopment under future land use planning. Within these parks, Initiative researchers found at least 1,299 low-income mobile home households at risk of displacement due to redevelopment.

As Austin residents and City staff scramble to find both short-term and long-term solutions to the affordability crisis, data like that collected by the Latino Research Initiative is a critical tool for negotiation. "We have to understand the scope of the problem to come up with a solution," says Almanza.

The City of Austin recently formed an Anti-Displacement Task Force to review and recommend action in several categories, including preserving and expanding the supply of affordable housing, controlling land for community development, and financing strategies for those efforts.

Meanwhile, across the country, communities are exploring many different ways to address the ongoing affordability crisis. In Leaburg, Oregon, for example, residents of the Vida Lea

Mobile Estates organized to purchase their park collectively, forming a resident-owned community. Other communities have explored the Community Land Trust (CLT) model, in which the City or other entity owns the land, while residents own their structure.

For community-based projects like these to succeed in Austin, however, stakeholders need the numbers, both in people and in data. As CodeNEXT discussions continue, Almanza and PODER will be holding community meetings to inform the public about upcoming land use changes and city and community initiatives to defend affordable housing.

Dr. Parra-Medina sees the Latino Research Initiative as a resource for the whole community. "As community stakeholders continue to work for a better, more equitable Austin, the Latino Research Initiative will continue to provide evidence-based data for informed negotiations. Knowledge is power. The Latino Research Initiative helps to provide that knowledge."

Aurora MARTINEZ JONES

DEMOCRAT
FOR 459TH DISTRICT JUDGE

I'm a product of Loving v. Virginia, as my father is from Mexico and my mother from Jamaica. Despite the challenges they faced, they maintained an optimism of first generation immigrants that anything is possible. That optimism and a work ethic earned me a spot at UT, with my sights set even further. When the only pre-law groups I could find were fraternities, I conducted a student survey then started my own: Minority Women Pursuing Law. I sought out mentors, from UT law professors, courthouse judges, and leading attorneys. After UT Law, I interviewed with the major civil firms, but chose instead to establish my own practice, The Martinez Jones Law Firm, PLLC, where I practiced child welfare law, personal injury, probate, real estate, family law and civil litigation. In 2015, I was sworn in as Associate Judge in Travis County for the Civil District Courts, presiding over child welfare dockets, including Family Drug Treatment Court and Permanent Managing Conservatorship docket, reviewing all Travis County cases with foster children in the permanent care of CPS. In short, I have the judicial experience, knowledge of the law, and passion to ensure we uphold the Travis County

ACC receives Upward Bound TRiO grants totaling 2.6 million over 5 years

The Austin Community College, College and High School Relations Office has received two Upward Bound TRiO grants to prepare first-generation, low-income high school students for success in college. One of the grants will serve 60 students at Reagan High School, and the other grant will serve 60 students at Travis High School. The grants total to approximately $2.6 million for five years.

The two schools were selected based on the school and community need, college completion, and socio-economic factors. The College and High School Relations Office has hired a director, Dr. Heather Elias, to lead the program and begin recruiting student participants this academic year.

Upward Bound improves academic skills, removes financial barriers to college, and maximizes the high school experience with social and cultural experiences. Students in Upward Bound have access to amazing resources, all free, including academic advising, standardized test preparation, supplemental instruction, scholarship and financial aid assistance, financial literacy training, and college campus tours.

"We are excited that we received funding to build and provide effective college access programs to high school students. Our goal is to ensure that every student in the ACC Upward Bound Program successfully completes high school with many college offers to pursue their future career aspirations," says Dr. Shasta Buchanan, Executive Director, High School Relations.

This academic pre-college initiative aligns with ACC's focus of helping all students reach their academic and career potential.

"ACC is dedicated to educational access and removing barriers to students enrolling in college and graduating," said Dr. Richard Rhodes, ACC President/CEO. "These grants will support ACC's work to help first-generation and low-income students have the opportunity for higher education."

About TRiO

Upward Bound is one of eight federal TRiO programs designed to help schools identify and serve low-income individuals, first-generation college students, and people with disabilities. Other programs include Educational Opportunity Centers that provide counseling and information on college admissions for adults, a Talent Search program that identifies disadvantaged individuals with high potential for success, and an Upward Bound program for veterans.

Feliz año nuevo HABLA! We're ready to kick-off 2018 with a significant HABLA platica regarding the important role Latinos will play in 2018! Join us for our first 2018 HABLA Platica on Wednesday, January 24, 2018, 7:30am-9am at Juan In A Million!

Hispanics/Latinos continue to account for more of the nation's overall population growth than any other race or ethnicity, according to a new Pew Research Center analysis of preliminary population estimates from the Census Bureau with more than 58.6 Million Latinos in the U.S. In Texas nearly 40% of Texans are Latino (11.2 million), and in Austin, Latinos are 36% of the city's population.

2018 is also an important election year in every spectrum, national, state and local, clearly Latinos have an opportunity once again, to play a significant role in the outcome of these critical elections. On the local level, five Council Members (including the Mayor), five AISD Board of Trustees, three Travis County Commissioner's Court representatives are up for re-election. Even in Austin, Texas we are long over due for some self-reflection, a new American majority composed of progressive people of color and Whites is already a demographic reality but this political alliance is not yet a political reality. That would require and is still awaiting an affirmative effort to be mobilized and realized by increasing "cultural competence" and making wiser electoral investments.

How the Latino perspectives and stories are told and reported in the media also influences our Latino quality of life. Latinos in mainstream media are a disappearing act. Earlier this year The Center for the Study of Ethnicity and Race at Columbia University (CSER), the National Association of Latino Independent Producers (NALIP) and The National Hispanic Foundation for the Arts (NHFA) issued a report entitled "The Latino Media Gap: A Report on the State of Latinos in U.S. Media". The report pointed to numerous gaps including: a major lack of Latinos in key creative and leadership positions in mainstream media, Latino stereotypes are prevalent in mainstream media and they restrict opportunities for Latino talent, as well as the public perception of Latinos, and that Latino representation is at its worst in the news media environment.

HABLA is proud to start off the new year with an important platica and panel discussion regarding Latinos in 2018. Our all-star panelists will include:

Changing Views on the Building of a Border Wall

In recent weeks the discussion of immigration and what is to become of the DACA students has come to the forefront. President Trump on Tuesday, January 9th, held a 55 minute meeting in the White House with Republican and Democratic leaders of the House and Senate to discuss an action plan. How far the politicians take this discussion remains to be seen.

At a more community the discussions about what to do with the status of those who are not citizens has also increased. We caught part of this discussion on our FACEBOOK feed with Ernesto Nieto, President of the National Hispanic Institute and hereby join the discussion with our readers of La Voz. Hay les va.

Nieto: A QUESTION WAS ASKED AT THE OFFICE TODAY...would DACAs support the current bill to build a wall if they were provided extended leave in the U.S.?

Anarely Marquez-Carranco: Here's my opinion as a Dreamer. Let them have their wall. All the Research indicates that there are currently more people leaving the US than there are people entering the US. The majority of those who remain undocumented in the US entered legally and simply overstayed their visas. The wall is pointless and it is a waste of money. However, I am tired of being a human bean bag. I am tired of Republicans and Democrats tossing my future around and never taking any responsibility for the lack of action on immigration. Give them their wall give them border security for the hypothetical non-existent floods of immigrants crossing the border into the U.S. As the president of Dreamers United at CSU I can say this is definitely the general consensus here. Give them the wall give them border security. However protect our families and us. We're okay with higher security at the wall but not with anything that may place our families at risk.

Carlos Romero: Caving even one inch on an idea as wasteful and pointless as a nonsensical border wall would be the stupidest thing Democrats could do. Obama tried pleasing them for years by upping immigration restrictions and it didn't help him at all politically. Moving forward, Trump's ultra nationalist staff want to eliminate nearly all immigrants coming to the country, legal or illegal, period. <https://www.npr.org/.../trump-to-unveil-legislation...> You don't comprise on a fundamental issue of right or wrong. You stop taking a defensive position, re-frame the argument, and fight back.

Anarely Marquez-Carranco: I think the issue here though is that no matter how many times we have reframed the issue no one has listened. I agree the wall is a fundamental thing and if I had my perfect world we would never build it. However the topic of immigration has just become so polarized that people block off any information that is contrary to their inherent belief. I could present all the facts on the detriments of higher border security, the benefits of immigration, current immigration trends but no one would listen. The very notion of immigration has become entangled with border security and budget and to try and reframe it would take years that frankly a lot of us don't have. I have friends dropping out of college because they see no future. They see no point in having college degrees that they cannot use. I understand what you're saying and idealistically I wholeheartedly agree but in the real practical political world that we live in it is not the solution that we need right now.

Ernesto Nieto: Am I correct in assuming that DACA persons would not be able to achieve citizenship status at all, in essence representing a "second class sector" of individuals with few protections....e

Carlos Romero: Anarely Marquez-Carranco The problem is you would also be a moving target after that. Without a clear cut path to citizenship, or at least permanent resident status, nothing changes other than now Democrats have voted for Trump's wall, the idea of a wall gains more false legitimacy, and the left is still on the defensive treating immigrants as a bad word. Democrats are not doing enough to make DACA a basic moral right or wrong issue on the national mindset, and immigration has been an easy bad word and wedge issue since 2006. My point is Democrats started caving then, and if they keep caving now it's not going to get better. It will get worse.

Anarely Marquez-Carranco: Oh yeah I would not do this for an extension for DACA. The deal is a Dream Act where we get a pathway to citizenship. That's the trade-off. Without that there's no deal.

Ernesto Nieto: Anarely, what do you mean there's no deal...there's never been a deal for DACA persons....they will get whatever fits the fancy of the current Congress and Trump, like it or not...In other words, DACA doesn't appear to have anything to do with the wall....the tying together of these two matters is poppycock....e

Ernesto Nieto: Actually Anarely, possibly the biggest and most important move that Latinos could do as individuals classified as DACA persons would be to become actively involved in Latino voter turnout in 2018....imagine 800,000 DACA activists actively promoting Latinos to register and vote in record numbers...this would be a big statement and possibly cause shifts in the makeup of the Congress that would view DACA persons more favorably....activate the vote...concentrate on that...as NHI will...join forces with us...e

Alfredo Santos: What I hear Anarely saying is that she is fine with building a wall.

Ernesto Nieto: what's sad about this Alfredo is that it doesn't matter what we think even if it comes from a save our own skin mentality...that's bound to happen and we should be not all that surprised...all of us have to accept that we are in an undeclared cultural war in the U.S. where particular populations actively wish to find ways of stemming the "browning of America." And one way of doing that is to use immigration as the bully pit to achieve some of those ends...staunch conservatives have little to gain from seeing Latinos increase either in numbers or voter strength...quite to the contrary....Immigration has historically been used as an access strategy for mobilizing a low wage work force that yields huge profits for the wealthy...agriculture is one of those industries as has been housing construction, the restaurant industry, trucking and transportation, and related types of work.

John K. Lechuga: Ernesto, the Republicans are not only asking for a "wall," they are also asking for legislation that would end sanctuary cities etc.. I have met several dreamers who rather not have this bill because at the end of the day it would make the life of their undocumented parents hell. It's not worth it. Most Americans support a Clean Dream Act and we should not give in Trump
