Pensamientos

The time has come, or maybe the time has already passed, for people to do something about the direction in which our country is headed. It is no secret that there are those who have been working for years to take control of the government. But one question that is not getting much attention is just how powerful is the government? Other than withhold money for programs and projects, where is the power of the government?

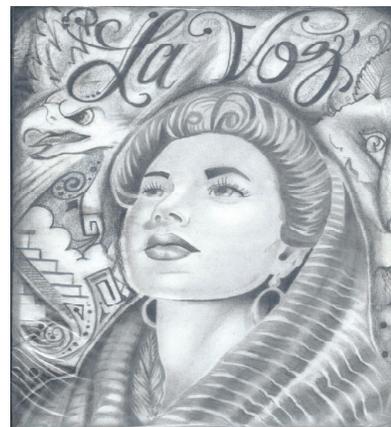

The Colonists back in the late 1700s did not believe that the all powerful British government was something invincible. When they decided to break away from England they knew there would be consequences. But if you believe in something you also believe in yourself and what you are willing to do to reach your objectives.

The time is coming or has already arrived for people to decide what they are going to do. There are going to be some difficult choices in front of us. Back in the late 1700s, Benjamin Franklin was for breaking away from England. His son William was not. His son thought it was best to remain with the powerful English.

And so the question becomes what are you, me, us, going to do? Are we going to continue to watch TV? Are we going to continue to seek out the happy hours? We know what happened to the Germans. How long do wait?

On the cover is a drawing that was sent in by Jason Moreno from Lovelady, Texas where one of the prisons in Texas is located. I found it in our files and thought that since March is Women's History Month, it would be appropriate for the cover.

Incarcerated folks in some of the units in Texas produce artwork that is very intricate and inspiring. Some even have websites where their work can be purchased.

Donald Trump's Common Sense

by Rogelio Sáenz

On January 29, as an American Airline flight was approaching its landing, there was a fatal collision between the airplane and a military helicopter over the Potomac River. A very tragic event that resulted in the loss of 67 lives. Just about 12 hours after this disastrous event, with many among us in shock and family members of the deceased mourning, Donald Trump saw a political opportunity.

Despite a full investigation underway, he publicly blamed DEI for the catastrophic event. He asserted that DEI programs have cut slack to allow “unqualified people”—namely, people of color, women, and people with disabilities—to obtain important jobs over more qualified individuals. The evidence? None!

How did he derive this conclusion regarding diversity having something to do with the crash, a reporter asked him. Trump's response: “Because I have common sense ok and unfortunately a lot of people don't.”

Trump's rush to judgment without any data is not new. Indeed, for Trump, facts and truth simply get in the way of him pushing a political position. During the presidential campaign, he regularly blamed Biden and Harris for ruining the U.S. economy and for making the nation a laughingstock of the world. Trump blamed immigrants for committing crimes with impunity. More recently, he blamed California Governor Gavin Newsome for the Los Angeles fires.

What could be going on in a person's head to blame DEI for the horrendous collision that took so many precious lives without any evidence? While we can only imagine, we do know that he is driven by political division, chaos, and revenge. In this case, he put DEI at center stage of culpability. It fit in with his decision to eliminate DEI and anything else resembling it from the federal government.

Earlier that week he signed an executive order ending DEI programs in the military. Earlier in the day of the fatal collision, Trump signed an executive order to ban the discussion of race and racism and gender in K-12 public schools with federal funds to be terminated from schools that do not comply. In Trump's mind, one would reason, the hours-old catastrophe helped in pressing his case on the urgency for eliminating DEI. Trump is quick to blame people of color and women for taking advantage of the “lowering of standards” that were created to benefit them to take positions away from people who actually had the “brilliance” and “merit” to have those positions. Trump with his false assuredness would proclaim, “Look, how dangerous DEI is!”

But one small detail that Trump conveniently overlooked in his remarks was that the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) was leaderless after the resignation of FAA Administrator Michael Whitaker, who announced his resignation in mid-December and who actually resigned the day of Trump's inauguration. Many speculate that Elon Musk, Trump's czar of Government Efficiency, forced out Whitaker who he opposed because of FAA safety violations and fines against his SpaceX involving two launches in addition to the imposition of an upcoming SpaceX launch. Musk, who was happy to see Whitaker go, undoubtedly placed his own commercial interests over the air safety of the American public. To Trump, blaming DEI would keep the heat away from the air collision being blamed on the leaderless FAA under his watch. This is reminiscent of Charles Stuart, a white man, who killed his pregnant wife in Boston in 1989 and blamed it on a fictitious Black man.

Back to Trump's illogical conclusion concerning the air disaster. Students are taught from elementary school to doctoral programs to use data and evidence to form their thoughts and arguments. A student who, without any evidence, blamed DEI for a fatal mid-air collision or one who blamed fire ants for the drop in the stock market would get a bad grade on their assignment.

Can we hold a U.S. president accountable for making extraordinary claims without a shred of evidence? Likely not, as Trump ended his remarks, members of his administration rushed to flatter him. As we have seen, fealty and loyalty have trumped brilliance and merit in Trump's selection of his cabinet and other high administrative positions. Lord help us if these are Trump's frontline to protect us from catastrophic situations such as another pandemic lurking around, climate change, and war.

Trump is Exhibit A for the need for fact checking. Unfortunately, Mark Zuckerberg is not questioning Trump's veracity. He, too, is loyal to Trump.

More Americans voted for

NOT a landslide.

Mexican President Claudia Sheinbaum addresses Trump:

“So, you voted to build a wall.

Well, dear Americans, even if you don’t understand much about geography, since for you America is your country and not a continent, it is important for you to know, before the first brick is laid, that there are 7 billion people beyond that wall.

But since you don’t really know the term “people,” we will call them “consumers.” There are 7 billion consumers ready to replace their iPhones with Samsung or Huawei devices in less than 42 hours. They can also replace Levi’s with Zara or Massimo Duti.

In less than six months, we can easily stop buying Ford or Chevrolet cars and replace them with Toyota, KIA, Mazda, Honda, Hyundai, Volvo, Subaru, Renault or BMW, which are technically better than the cars they produce. These 7 billion people can also stop subscribing to Direct TV, and we don’t want to do that, but we can stop watching Hollywood movies and start watching more Latin American or European productions that have better quality, message, cinematic techniques and content.

Although it may sound incredible, we can skip Disney and go to the Xcaret resort in Cancun, Mexico, Canada or Europe: there are other great destinations in South America, East America and Europe. And even if you don’t believe it, even in Mexico there are better hamburgers than McDonald’s and they have better nutritional content. Has anyone seen pyramids in the United States? In Egypt, Mexico, Peru, Guatemala, Sudan and other countries there are pyramids with incredible civilizations.

Find out where to find the wonders of the ancient and modern world. None of them in the US. Shame on Trump, he would have bought them and sold them!

We know that Adidas exists, not just Nike, and we can start wearing Mexican sneakers like Panam. We know more than you think. We know, for example, that if these 7 billion consumers don’t buy their products, there will be unemployment and their economy will collapse (within the racist wall) to such an extent that they will beg us to tear down this ugly wall.

We didn’t want to, but.... You want a wall, you get a wall.

Sincerely yours.”

NOMAS NO TO MASS DEPORTATION

FEAR AND FALSE NARRATIVES

by Alicia Perez-Hodge

Donald Trump, since the beginning of his political career, has railed against immigrants, consistently describing them in disparaging terms. In 2015, he railed against Mexican immigrants saying, “They’re bringing drugs, they’re bringing crime, they’re rapists, and some I assume are good people.” In his last campaign in 2024, Trump continued using inaccurate, derogatory, and often racist language to refer to immigrants, such as the ridiculous accusations that Haitian immigrants in Ohio were stealing and eating cats and dogs. Another example of the hate rhetoric was displayed at a press conference last September when Trump referred to undocumented immigrants by saying, “You wouldn’t believe how bad these people are, these aren’t people. These are animals.”

The false narratives and frightening exaggerations continued his first day in office with the following Executive Order, “America’s Sovereignty is under attack. This invasion has caused widespread chaos and suffering in our country over the last four years. It has led to the horrific and inexcusable murders of many innocent American citizens, including women and children, at the hands of illegal aliens. Foreign criminal gangs and cartels have begun seizing control of parts of cities, attacking our most vulnerable citizens, and terrorizing Americans beyond the control of local law enforcement. The integrity of American sovereign borders represents a grave threat to our nation.”

Such alarming and dehumanizing language used by Donald Trump is strategically used to incite fear and stoke hate.

Unfortunately, such fear-mongering and xenophobic rhetoric from MAGA Republicans does not stop at the White House. It resounds in the Texas Statehouse. Governor Greg Abbott consistently refers to immigrants crossing at the Southern border as an “invasion.” Abbott’s repeated emphasis on border security is accompanied by language that implicitly links illegal immigration with criminality and disorder.

Even without using explicit slurs, the insinuation that all immigrants are criminals and the only solution is mass deportation is wrong and misguided. Wrong because it’s based on a false premise that undocumented immigrants commit or cause crime and don’t contribute to our economy. Misguided because of the astronomical cost of operations and transportation required to deport of 13 million men, women and children to their countries of origin. Misguided because Mass Deportation will cause labor shortages resulting in construction slowdowns, increased costs to U.S. consumers and untold suffering for immigrants and US citizens alike. Let’s look at the facts.

CRIME AND IMMIGRANTS: THE FACTS

Immigrants coming to the U.S. today are not much different than those of yesteryear; they come to the United States to work and seek a better life for their children.

Immigrants have been coming to the United States since its founding, and accusations of criminality have been hurled at the Irish, Italians, Chinese, Mexicans, Japanese, and even Germans during WWII. Scapegoating ethnic and religious minorities is an ancient practice, primarily because they make easy targets.

All large populations have individuals who commit crimes. Despite their legal status, persons who commit crimes should be arrested, adjudicated, and face the consequences of their actions. There is no tolerance for crime, especially acts of violence in the Latino community nor in a civil society.

Since, the alarming rhetoric surrounding undocumented immigrants involves consistent claims they commit crimes and are a threat to public safety, and since those narratives are often used to justify exorbitant expenditures and unjust laws, then the research and data-driven conclusions on the issue are worth examining.

Despite the false claims that immigrants are prone to commit violent crimes, research consistently indicates that immigrants are far less likely to be arrested or convicted of violent crime. convicted of homicide.

An interesting study on immigrants and crime conducted by the American Immigration Council indicates “that as the immigrant share of population in the U.S. grew, the crime rate declined.” The chart below shows that in 1980 immigrants made up 6.2 percent of the U.S. population, and the total crime rate was 5,900 crimes per 100,000 people. By 2022, the share of immigrants had more than doubled to 13.9 percent, while the total crime rate had dropped by 60.4 percent.

While conducting research for this article, I discovered that Texas is the only state in the Union that tracks criminal arrests and convictions by immigration status. The data provided by the Texas Department of Public Safety also confirms that, despite political rhetoric fueled by Xenophobia and racism, undocumented immigrants come to the U.S. to work, not to commit crimes. This is supported by research conducted by reputable institutions such as the CATO Institute and the American Immigration Council using data from our own Texas Department of Public Safety (TDPS).

Understanding the lower crime rate among undocumented immigrants is easy and makes common sense. Given the dangerous and arduous travel endured by immigrants to get to the United States, the last thing on their minds is to commit a crime. In fact, most immigrants are running from crime, disorder, and chaos. Undocumented immigrants are acutely aware of their precarious legal status and the severe consequences of criminal behavior.

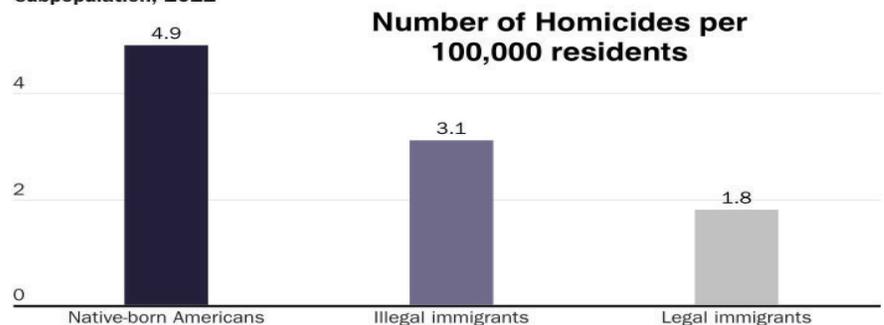

As a result, they tend to be more law-abiding to avoid drawing attention to themselves. Lower crime rates among undocumented immigrants are reflective of their commitment to the American Dream. Immigrants focus on work and providing for their loved ones, not engaging in criminal activity. Most undocumented immigrants are hardworking individuals who contribute positively to the economy.

THE COSTS of MISGUIDED POLICIES and MASS DEPORTATION

According to the Pew Research Center and several other sources, there were approximately 13 million undocumented immigrants living in the U.S. at the end of 2024. During his presidential campaign, Trump vowed to remove all 13 million of them through “the largest deportation of illegal immigrants in U.S. History.” In Texas, Governor Abbott has used billions of dollars to militarize the Texas southern border in an attempt to curb illegal immigration through Operation Lone Star. According to Governor Abbott, the state spent 11 billion dollars on border security over four years, a staggering amount that could have been invested in other critical areas like education and healthcare.

Hell No TO MASS DEPORTATION

FEAR AND FALSE NARRATIVES

MASS DEPORTATION IS EXPENSIVE IN MANY WAYS

There are two components to assessing the fiscal cost of mass deportation. First, is the operational costs of arrest, detention, legal processing, and deportation. The second cost component of mass deportation is the resulting labor shortage that will increase consumer prices, especially in industries such as construction, agriculture, healthcare, and hospitality.

Keep in mind that the Trump Mass Deportation Plan intends to deport approximately 13 million undocumented immigrants, which is approximately 4% of the US population.

COST OF OPERATIONS

A report issued by the American Immigrant Council (AIC) found that a one-time mass deportation operation would cost an estimated total of 315 billion dollars, and they call their estimate “highly conservative.” AIC explains their “estimate does not take into account the long-term costs of a sustained mass deportation operation or the incalculable additional cost necessary to acquire the institutional capacity to remove over 13 million people in a short period. Incalculable because there is no reality in which such a singular operation is possible.”

In simple terms, the AIC reports that such a vast operation of expelling 13 million immigrants from U.S. soil and repatriation to their native countries has never been tried and they don't believe it is possible. The majority of economists and social scientists agree. Trump's Mass Deportation Plan is unrealistic logistically and financially. In addition, it is detrimental to the US economy by causing a labor shortage and increasing prices for American consumers.

PROVIDING CONTEXT TO THE MASS DEPORTATION

To put the scale of the “Mass Deportation” operation in context. The deportation of 13 million men, women, and children would be like:

- Arresting, detaining, adjudicating and transporting the entire population of the state of Pennsylvania (Pop. 13,002,700)
- Arresting, detaining, adjudicating and transporting all residents of the following cities combined:

Los Angeles	3,822,238.
Chicago	2,665,039.
Houston	2,302,878.
Philadelphia	1,563,025
Dallas	1,299,544.
San Antonio	1,472,909

One more example to put into context mass deportation compared to reality:

- The entire US prison and jail population in 2023, comprising every person held in local county, state, and federal prisons and jails, was 1.9 million people. Instead of deporting all 13 million undocumented immigrants all at one time another option is to deport one million a year. The conservative price tag for that option is estimated at $88 billion annually or a trillion dollars over the next twelve years.

Besides the astronomical cost of deporting millions of immigrants, economists agree that mass deportation will lower the nation's GDP significantly and have disastrous impact on the U.S. economy..

Immigrants provide a ready labor force, especially in industries such as construction, agriculture, healthcare, and hospitality. A labor shortage in these areas will lead to higher grocery costs, increase restaurant prices, and slow down construction, thereby increasing building costs and decreasing the availability of affordable housing. The loss of healthcare workers will hurt older adults and increase the cost of healthcare. For this article I examined how mass deportation will negatively impact construction and agriculture in Texas.

IMPACT ON THE CONSTRUCTION INDUSTRY IN TEXAS

The US economy has been healthy since the recovery from COVID. Texas has experienced a surge in construction. According to industry reports, the commercial construction industry in Texas is expected to grow to $27 billion over the next five years. Unemployment rates during the Biden Administration were among the lowest in US history. The Associated Builders and Contractors (ABC) projects the construction industry will need nearly 454,000 new workers in 2025, in addition to regular industry hiring trends.

In a position paper presented by the US

Hispanic Contractors Association (USHCA) in January 2025, the impact of mass deportation on the construction industry in Texas is addressed. The USHCA points out that approximately 50 percent of the construction workforce in Texas is comprised of immigrants and about a quarter of those workers are undocumented. The paper goes on to state, “Immigrants play a critical role in the Texas construction industry. The ability to support and assist the vast pool of undocumented workers in our industry is essential as the loss of these workers could bring construction in Texas to the proverbial halt”

Some studies estimate, such as a 2022 study by the Workers' Defense Fund and the University of Texas, that undocumented workers make up 50 percent of the construction workforce in Texas. Either way, the numbers are significant and detrimental to the Texas economy. These predictions of the dire consequences of mass deportation are expressed by business leaders in Texas, not politicians. For example Stan Marek, CEO of Marek, a Houston based commercial and residential construction giant told NPR,

“ It would devastate our industry we wouldn't finish our highways. We wouldn't finish our schools. Affordable housing would disappear.”

AGRICULTURE

The lack of workers in agriculture will undoubtedly increase grocery prices for the American consumer. Undocumented workers are vital to the US agricultural sector, comprising about 50% of farm laborers, especially in California, Texas, and Florida. Mass deportation threatens to disrupt the food supply chain by contributing to labor shortages and increased food prices. Russell Boeing, President of the Texas Farm Bureau, states, “We want a secure border, but we also understand that immigrant labor is vital to agriculture. Teresa Romero, President of the Farm Workers Union states that with mass deportation, Love you. US consumers will have to import more food “but with the proposed 25% tariffs on imported food, the US consumer will pay a much higher price for food.” Even dairy farmers in Vermont caution that mass deportation of undocumented immigrants would significantly increase the cost of milk.

Moreover, the economic contributions of undocumented immigrants are often overlooked. They are vital in various sectors, including agriculture, construction, and service industries. Deporting millions of undocumented hurts the economy, causing food prices to increase and hurting those who can afford it least.

CONCLUSION

The narrative of mass deportation is not only unrealistic but also inhumane. It ignores the complexities of immigration and the contributions of undocumented immigrants to the labor force and society as a whole. While this article focuses on misguided policies, costs, and the feasibility of mass deportation, it is understood that the actual toll of mass deportation will be borne by the immigrants, their families, their American-born children, and the communities these workers serve.

Undocumented immigrants contribute significantly to the economy through labor, consumption, and tax payments. They often fill essential roles in jobs that native-born workers avoid. Studies indicate that legalization could boost their earnings and consumption, further enhancing their economic impact on the U.S. economy.

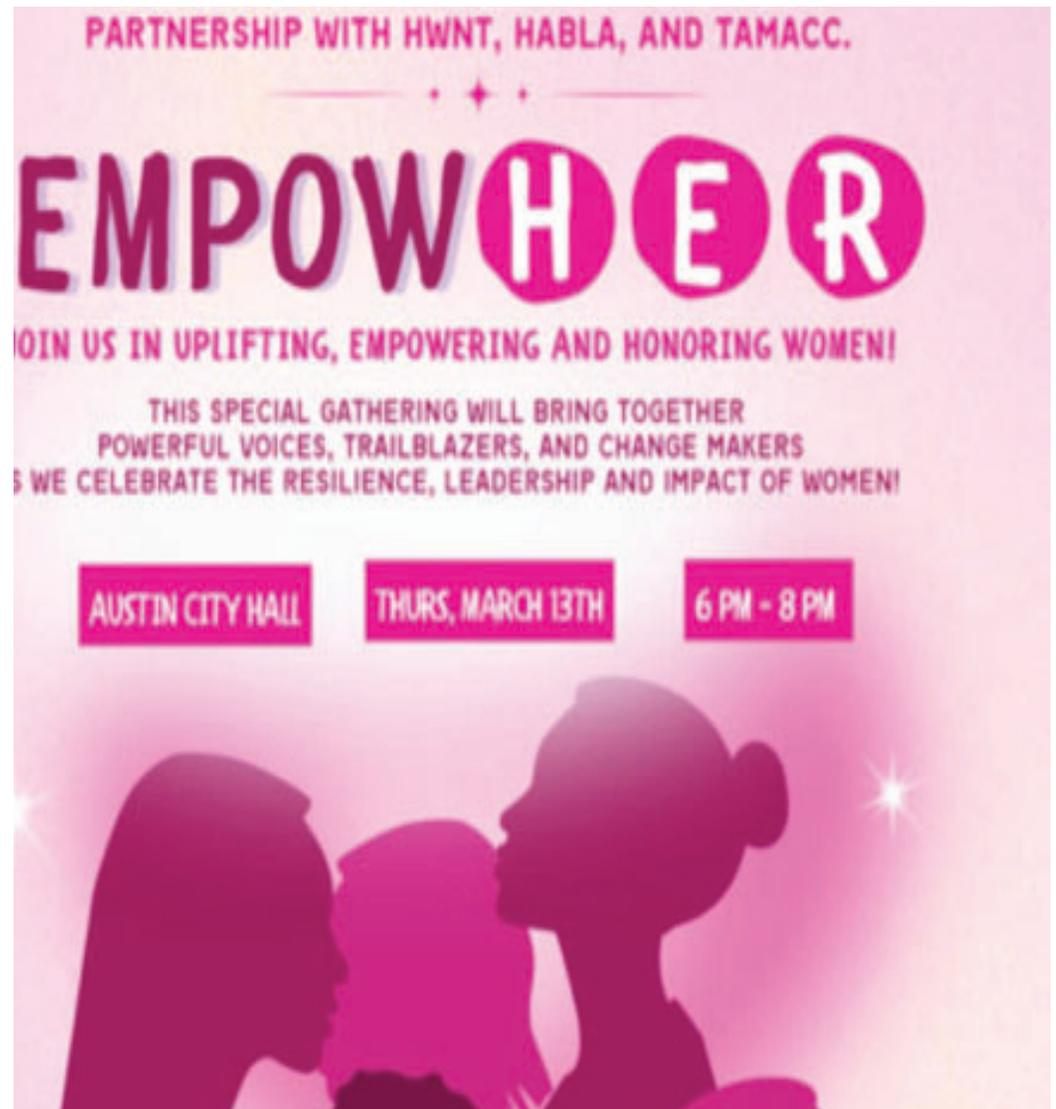

Putting aside political ideology and prioritizing the good and welfare of the U.S. economy plus the financial stability of American families, Congress must address comprehensive immigration reform. Undocumented immigrants are not criminals; the US needs workers, and immigrants need jobs; in addition, no reasonable person believes that deporting 13 million people is either feasible or affordable. Mass deportation is a bad idea! Nomas no to mass deportation. We can do better. Si se puede.

New Kid in Town

The following first appeared in the February 27th 2025 FaceBook post series of Throwback Thursday for Alfredo Santos c/s.

Entering the 8th Grade

I had always heard people talk about having “butterflies in their stomach” when they were nervous. But I had never felt that until my mother drove up to the Jr. High that first morning. I wasn’t shaking or anything like that, but my stomach was making all kinds of strange noises. I got off the car and slowly made my way inside the 8th grade building. My mother wished me well before driving off to work.

Ingrown Toenails

About a week before school started I told my mother about a problem I was having with my foot. We went to the doctor, (Dr. Shudde) and he said I had an ingrown toe nail. He sat me up on a table and proceeded to cut into me. Of course it hurt, but I maintained a straight face. (No crying) We discussed how I was going walk and what shoes I was going to use. It was Dr. Shudde who suggested that I get an old pair of tennis shoes and cut off the tops to expose my toes. This he said, would relieve the pressure and help the healing. I thought this was a good idea and so I followed his suggestion.

Meeting the Rat

One of the first classes I had was Mrs. Green’s reading class. It was upstairs. I don’t know why I was put in a reading class because I had always been good at reading. But here I was. Some of the students in my class were Mary Helen Canales, a tall girl whose real name was Jesusita but everyone called her “Houses,” another student was a guy named Sostenes Gutierrez but everyone called him “Booger.” Other guys I remember were Felipe, but everyone called him “Pache” and Robert Flores. He didn’t have a nickname. It was also in this class that first met a guy who would turn out to become a life-long friend. His name was Richard J. Garcia, but everyone called him “Rata.”

When Rata saw my tennis shoes and the modifications I had made, he couldn’t stop staring. He smiled and called everyone’s attention to my feet. “Wacha los tenis de este vato!” He thought my “convertible tennis shoes” were the latest style out of California. I had to explain that they were not. The reason I cut off the tops was because of ingrown toenails. But he was insistent that my tennis were a fashion statement! He couldn’t stop saying in a long drawn out breath, “Wacha, los tenis de este vato!”

Mrs. Green’s Reading Class

There were about 20 students in Mrs. Green’s reading class. One day in class we were taking turns reading out loud. Mrs. Green would go up and down the rows so you knew when it was your turn. Well, it was getting close to Rata’s turn to read and Mrs. Green calls on him. Richard began reading and then all of a sudden, he stops. The whole class looks up to see what was the matter. Richard, it turns out, had this habit stopping when he came to a word he did not know how to pronounce. And what he would do is say, “Yes” or “No” as he tried to decide how to publicly pronounce the word in question. If he wasn’t sure, he would continue to go back and forth with “Yes” or “No.”

Finally, he would say the word in question and lo and behold, he would get it wrong. This is when Mrs. Green would intervene and correct him in front of the whole class. So on this particular occasion she said, “Richard, you are the only boy I know who can argue with himself and still lose!” Que pinche! El pobre de Richie was doing his best when la Mrs. Green would drop this statement on him. We all felt bad for him. But what could we do? Then she would tell him the correct pronunciation of the word in question.

Where the hell do you think you are?

During those first few months at the Junior High School, I learned some Texas manners that were new to me. I was out on the playground and tore my pants. I made my way to the office thinking that I may have to go home. But the people in the office said, no, there was a sewing machine they had access to and that they could fix the tear. As I sat in another room, someone took my pants, Then the principal walked in. His name was Mr. Baldwin. There was another man with him. I think he was the school counselor. Mr. Baldwin asked me a question and I responded with a lackadaisical California “Yeah.” Big mistake!

Both men turned around and leaned into me and it was Mr. Baldwin with a stern look on his face who promptly asked “retorically, ‘Yeah? Where the hell do you think you are?’” I guess he sensed the fear coming out of my eyes because he followed up with, “You are not in California! Here in Texas, it’s yes sir or no sir! Do you understand young man?” I nervously shook my head in the affirmative and their collective glares slowly dissipated. (Que pinche susto me dieron! Y luego yo nomas en calzoncio?)

The Knock on the Door

I think it was the last Friday of October 1965. We had been discussing Halloween in Mrs. Green’s reading class when we heard a loud knock on the door. Mrs. Green got up to go see who it was. As she opened the door, Mr. Baldwin, the principal, glanced at her and in a firm voice directed toward the class said, “All the boys need to stand up and come outside into the hallway.” Everyone exchanged looks of astonishment. Rata was more vocal and said in a low voice, “Baaboso!” This was his word for astonishment or surprise. Other people might have said “wow” but the Rat was figurative in his speech.

As I stepped into the hallway, I saw four uniformed police officers. They were standing so that we couldn’t see them until we went through the door. “Up against the wall!” came the command. Once everyone was lined up, Mr. Baldwin told us this was a search for drugs and weapons. “Empty your pockets and place all items on the floor between your feet.” We looked at each other and did as we were told.

The Inspection

The police officers began to go down the line to see what we had. All I had was some change and a little plastic car that somehow got in my pocket. As I would later learn, a lot of the students in Mrs. Green’s reading class were from El Barrio de Abajo. According to the students, this neighborhood was the toughest one in Uvalde. It was located in the Southeast quadrant of the city. If you were from El Barrio de Abajo, the word was that people needed to think twice before messing with you.

As the policemen inspected what was on the floor most of what they found was gum and lunch money. But when Mr. Baldwin got to Robert Flores, he called out to the policemen. “I think we have something.” What Mr. Baldwin and the four policemen were staring at was an object wrapped in aluminum foil. They closely examined the object and poked it with a pencil. Then they looked up at Robert and asked him what kind of drugs did he bring to school?

In a quiet voice and his best English, Robert told them, “Sir, it is not any kind of drug. My mother gave me a bean and cheese taco with a little bit of green chile.” The police and the school principal looked at each other puzzled by Robert’s response. Then they slowly unwrapped the taco to ascertain if it was in fact a bean and cheese taco. They appeared disappointed when they realized Robert was telling the truth.

All of the students who were lined up for this “drug search” did their best to contain their laughter. Of course Robert was very embarrassed that it had been publicly disclosed that he was in possession of a bean and cheese taco with chile. (Back then eating Mexican food in public was considered taboo.)

Detention Hall

Something else at Uvalde Junior High School that was new to me was something called Detention Hall. There was a teacher over in the 7 grade building named Mrs. Ratloff. If you got into trouble and were assigned Detention Hall, it meant you would be spending time after school with Mrs. Ratloff. Some of the reasons why a student would be sent to Detention Hall included speaking Spanish on school grounds, misbehaving and violating the student dress code. I got sent to Detention Hall once because I was not wearing a belt. That’s right, I committed the offense of going to school and not wearing a belt. I did

Warriors for Social Justice: Maria Jimenez of Houston and Mexican American Activists

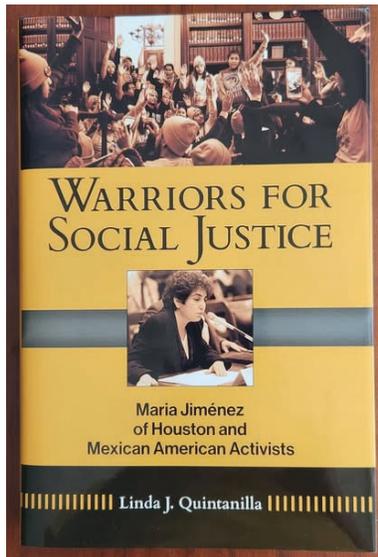

by Anita Quintanilla

Warriors for Social Justice examines the contributions of Mexican American activists to the nation's democratic values by concentrating on the activism of Maria Jiménez (1950–2020) in Houston, Texas.

Linda J. Quintanilla tells the life story of this admired immigrant and human rights activist who not only fought racist discriminations such as segregation but also typified other Mexican American activists. Quintanilla documents how Jiménez and other activists advanced social justice by promoting our nation's best virtues, especially equality.

In 1971, when only 20, Jiménez already had a definition of what it meant for her to be an activist: "when I see a problem which I feel needs a solution, then I go out to solve it." Quintanilla describes her lifelong battle against injustice, be it racist, sexist, or anti-immigrant animus. The Immigrant Workers Freedom Ride in 2003, only one of her many impressive achievements, delighted her the most. The experience introduced its participants, undocumented immigrants, to historic places and African American activists and descendants from the Civil Rights Movement. The Freedom Ride, Jiménez believed, not only was educational but also inspired the immigrants in their long and difficult fight to gain legal status—a true victory for social justice.

Quintanilla uses Critical Race Theory (CRT), which examines the relationship between race, racism, and power, as the framework for studying Jiménez and Mexican American activism. She describes the racial discrimination that the Mexican-origin community experienced in Texas, with a focus on Houston, dating from the state's earliest years and continuing into the twenty-first century. The commonplace belief in the inferiority of the Mexican-origin minority contributed, for example, to segregation, substandard public schools, and denial of the vote and jury duty.

Latina/os in the United States: Diversity and Change

by Rogelio Sáenz,
Maria Cristina Morales and Coda

As the major driver of US demographic change, Latinos are reshaping key aspects of the social, economic, political, and cultural landscape of the country. In this second edition of Latina/os in the United States, Sáenz, Morales, and Rayo-Garza highlight the experiences of Latinos in a variety of domains, including gender and sexuality, education, political engagement, work and economic life, family, religion, health and health care, crime and victimization, mass media, and the arts. This updated edition includes the latest demographic trends, discusses recent mass shootings of Latinos, the impact of the Trump administration, and COVID-19. With greater focus on the Afro-Latino population and Latina/o social thought, it offers sociological perspectives on both native-born and immigrant populations, and engages readers in thinking about the major issues that Latinos are facing. The book clearly illustrates the diverse experiences of the array of Latino groups in the United States, with some of these groups succeeding socially and economically, while other groups continue to experience major social and economic challenges. The book concludes with a discussion of what the future holds for Latinos. This book is essential reading for students, social scientists, and policymakers interested in Latinos and their place in contemporary society.

Latinos in the United States: What Everyone Needs to Know

by Ilan Stavans

As the largest and youngest minority group in the United States, the 60 million Latinos living in the U.S. represent the second-largest concentration of Hispanic people in the entire world, after Mexico. Needless to say, the population of Latinos in the U.S. is causing a shift, not only changing the demographic landscape of the country, but also impacting national culture, politics, and spoken language. While Latinos comprise a diverse minority group -- with various religious beliefs, political ideologies, and social values--commentators on both sides of the political divide have lumped Latino Americans into a homogenous group that is often misunderstood.

Latinos in the United States: What Everyone Needs to Know® provides a wide-ranging, multifaceted exploration of Latino American history and culture, as well as the forces shaping this minority group in the U.S. From exploring the origins of the term "Latino" and examining what constitutes Latin America, to tracing topical issues like DREAMers, the mass incarceration of Latino males, and the controversial relationship between Latin America and the United States, Ilan Stavans seeks to understand the complexities and unique position of Latino Americans. Throughout he breaks down the various subgroups within the Latino minority (Mexican-Americans, Dominican-Americans, Cuban-Americans, Puerto Ricans on the mainland, and so on), and the degree to which these groups constitute -- or don't -- a homogenous community, their history, and where their future challenges lie.

Stavans, one of the world's foremost authorities on global Hispanic civilization, sees Latino culture as undergoing dramatic changes as a result of acculturation, changes that are fostering a new "mestizo" identity that is part Hispanic and part American. However, Latinos living in the United States are also impacting American culture. As Ilan Stavans argues, no other minority group will have a more decisive impact on the future of the United States.

El propósito de una reunión pública es dar la oportunidad de presentar comentarios o hacer preguntas acerca de la solicitud. La TCEQ realiza una reunión pública si el Director Ejecutivo determina que hay un grado de interés público suficiente en la solicitud o si un legislador local lo pide. Una reunión pública no es una audiencia administrativa de lo contencioso.

OPORTUNIDAD DE UNA AUDIENCIA ADMINISTRATIVA DE LO CONTENCIOSO. Después del plazo para presentar comentarios públicos, el Director Ejecutivo considerará todos los comentarios apropiados y preparará una respuesta a todo los comentarios públicos esenciales, pertinentes, o significativos. A menos que la solicitud haya sido referida directamente a una audiencia administrativa de lo contencioso, la respuesta a los comentarios y la decisión del Director Ejecutivo sobre la solicitud serán enviados por correo a todos los que presentaron un comentario público y a las personas que están en la lista para recibir avisos sobre esta solicitud. Si se reciben comentarios, el aviso también proveerá instrucciones para pedir una reconsideración de la decisión del Director Ejecutivo y para pedir una audiencia administrativa de lo contencioso. Una audiencia administrativa de lo contencioso es un procedimiento legal similar a un procedimiento legal civil en un tribunal de distrito del estado.

TCEQ puede actuar sobre una solicitud para renovar un permiso para la descarga de aguas residuales sin brindar la oportunidad de una audiencia de caso impugnado si se cumplen ciertos criterios.

ACCIÓN DEL DIRECTOR EJECUTIVO. El Director Ejecutivo puede emitir una aprobación final de la solicitud a menos que exista un pedido antes del plazo de vencimiento de una audiencia administrativa de lo contencioso o se ha presentado un pedido de reconsideración.
